Storm causes damage

By Karen Krien

Late Thursday afternoon, a storm went southeastward through a portion of Cheyenne County, leaving a nasty path of destruction.

It started in western Cheyenne County, just north of U.S. 36. Ron Zimbelman and Kurt Bucholtz farms appeared to be around the start with those farms west and north receiving only a trace of rain.

According to the National Weather Service in Goodland, the dark blue clouds brought winds of up to 70 miles per hour in Cheyenne County. In Sherman County, wind gusts of up to 76 miles per hour were reported.

Peggy Alander at the National Weather Service said there was golfsized hail reported in Sherman County but only dime-sized hail in Cheyenne County. However, people in Cheyenne County saw much bigger hail.

Lanny DeGood, who lives 8 miles south of St. Francis, said the hail was "saucer-shaped" measuring about three- to four-inches across and only about an inch thick. It came with such force that it knocked the needles off the evergreen trees which formed a windbreak on the farm.

Further southeast, it knocked the windows out of the north side of the Junior Smull house and took leaves and pine needles off their trees. Tom Smull said that he and his dad (Junior) were in the pickup when the storm hit. He said it had lasted around 20 minutes and while they were in the pickup, Tom's son Matt had called the cell phone to tell them that the hail was knocking out the windows but they could barely hear because of the intense pounding of the hail.

There were 13 windows (includes windows and storm windows) hailed out and the shades which were pulled were in shreds. The storm had also blown out the windows in the granary and the machine shed.

The hail was 6 to 8-inches deep and had piled up into 1 to 2-foot drifts along the side of the buildings. The hail which was on the north side of the buildings was still there the next morning.

The Smulls had an enormous amount of damage to buildings and crops. The wheat crop was almost nothing this year, so they had planted milo. Tom said the milo was beautiful before the storm, but, now it, along with the soybeans, irrigated and dryland corn, looks like a bunch of sticks. The storm washed out all of their terraces and beat down 1,120 acres of grass

They had no idea how much rain they had as all three of their rain gauges were destroyed. However, their neighbors, Dan and Rita

HAIL TOOK the leaves off of the trees and broke the windows at the Junior Smull place south of St. Francis.

Stephens, who had less rain and little damage, had around an inch.

"Dad said there had been a similar storm in 1951 which had also left broken windows in their house," Tom said

Gloria Bracelin, St. Francis, had been to see her daughter and family in Oakley and was headed home when she met with the storm.

She had just pulled off the road when a white sheet of hail and wind hit. She described it as if someone had put a white sheet over her vehicle, turned on the wind as fast as it could go and started throwing buckets of rocks on her. She saw the windshield start to crack so crawled in the backseat, all the time, the wind almost tossing the vehicle over to its side.

The damage to the Ford Expedition was estimated at $8,500. There was damage to the graders and one truck driver told that his semi truck was "scooted" across the highway to the opposite ditch.

Margaret Bucholtz said her vegetable and flower gardens were completely wiped out and water filled the 4-foot-deep ditch and was over the driveway. However, those driving on some of the country roads following the storm said the roads were fairly driveable as the rain had come so fast that it had not had a chance to soak in.
