Randy Hrabe, executive director of Northwest Kansas Planning and Development Commission, Hill City, along with Ned Smith and Cathy Domsch, presented the final papers including having the commissioners approve the signing of a resolution which stated that the commissioners could not use the facility for official meetings.

The basic Community Development Block Grant for which the grant application is being made is for $665,000. The dairy project, located southeast of Bird City, is estimated to cost $9.1 million. Besides the grant, the McCarty family, Century II, Amarillo National Bank and Farm Credit of Western Kansas and Rural Development of Hays will be involved with investments in the dairy. The dairy is to provide 19 jobs with 10 needing to be classed as lowto-moderate income. A family of four could earn $39,850 and still be considered low-to-moderate in-

Ambulance

Jannelle Bowers, ambulance director, told the commissioners that there were two people who were very interested in taking the emergency medical technician classes in Goodland. The cost is $750 with no college credits; or $1,000 if college asked about the additional cost of credits are earned. The commissioners agreed to pay the $750 for each of the people taking the class. If they want the college credits, they will need to pay for the credits them-

Mrs. Bowers said that four of the new radios used by technicians were not working. She had sent them in but, after a week, the radios had not been returned. The commissioners asked Mrs. Bowers to call Video Kingdom that day and tell them that it was necessary that the repaired radios be returned immediately or send new replacements — that the radios were needed for emergencies.

Mrs. Bowers also told about Ambulance 11B which had a speedometer which was not working. It was being fixed that day.

Enhanced 911

Sheriff Troy Gardner said Cheyties which had applied for the Enhanced 911 grant. He felt like the grant was geared toward smaller counties and thought that the county might have a very good chance of getting it. If the county does get the grant, there will need to be some decisions made including where to move the dispatch center as there will be more equipment to work with.

Jane Brubaker, commissioner, hiring around-the-clock help if the center is moved from the St. Francis power plant. Sheriff Gardner said that help is already being paid by the county and city. The power plant crew would check the engines by automation.

After discussion, the commissioners agreed to see if the county received the grant before making any definite decisions. In the meantime, they can be thinking about where to place the center.

Meeting

Elmer Kellner, the county's representative to the Western Prairie Resource, Conservation and Development, told the commissioners about the annual meeting which will be held in St. Francis on Oct. 12. He thought it would be good if the commissioners planned to attend.

He also said that he would welcome any input the commissioners might want to give him as a representative. He said that the Resource, Conservation and Development board is considering a water conservation project. He also talked about having a household hazardous waste disposal in St. Francis and Bird City instead of just at the landfill site. These projects will be discussed and Mr. Kellner would like to bring information back to the commissioners.

WW I veteran, died and was buried in the St. Francis Cemetery. There was never a head stone for Mr. Pyle but an infant son had a small brass marker. As the years passed, grass grew over the marker and the Pyles' graves seemed to disappear. Bert's son Bob was 8-years-old Bob, who now lives in Otis, Colo., had intended to see that his father would have a permanent marker on his grave some day. In May, Bob met Ron and Dot Hill, St. Francis, in the directory building at the St. Francis Cemetery. They helped Bob locate the Remley plot of ground.
