

The Busy Beavers 4-H Club (above) walked the length of the parade, proudly carrying a flag in their midst. The Norton American Legion Auxiliary's float (below) was a solemn sight to see yesterday. The float included graves and a cross to honor those who died for their country.

As one part of a threesome, David Donovan held the American flag high, while Gene Wiltfong (hidden) led a riderless, black horse with an empty boot in the stirrup. The riderless horse represented all of the veterans who have died, whether it was while they were in service to their country or at home. A role call was read of all of the veterans who died during the past year.

The Blue Jay Band, under the direction of David Will, made a sharp turn east at the corner of State and Washington.
