Hunters gather for good food

More than 100 pheasant hunters and local residents turned out for the annual Norcat Pheasant Hunters Supper held Saturday evening at the Norcat United Methodist Church's Educational Building.

Members of the church prepared turkey, dressing, mashed potatoes, gravy, ham loaf, vegetables, salads and desserts for the buffet-style meal. Youngsters from the congregation busied tables and poured drinks.

Church member, Lora Arnold said hunters registered from Kansas, Nebraska, Colorado, South Carolina, South Dakota, Missouri and even Alaska.

Early reports of bird population are good. One hunter said, "We saw a lot of birds. Didn't hit very many, but we saw a lot."

Want to add some zing to a meal? Try some horseradish. This pungent root crop is a flavorful accompaniment for foods such as beef, chicken, fish, potatoes, beets and seafood cocktail sauce.

Fresh horseradish is harvested in the fall after a hard freeze or in the early spring before new growth begins. Use the roots immediately. If not used right away, store in a root cellar or in a tightly covered jar in the refrigerator or freezer. Recommended storage times are four to six weeks in the refrigerator and six months or more in the freezer.

For the hottest flavor, use the roots immediately. By themselves, they have little flavor. Once grated, enzymes release volatile oils which contain the sharp flavor. Grind in a well ventilated room because the fumes are strong. You might even consider doing the grinding outside if the weather permits using an old fashioned crank grinder. (Be sure to stand

For very hot flavor, wait three minutes before adding vinegar. Store in airtight glass jars in the refrigerator or freezer. For best flavor, use within 24 hours.

Horseradish does not dry well. When re-hydrated, it will become tough and rubbery with a hay-like flavor.

As horseradish ages, it will turn dark in color. It will lose pungency and develop off flavors. The product is old and should not be used.

upwind when grinding).

To grate, wash, peel and dice into small cubes. Only grind what will be used. Place cubes into a blender, food processor, or a grinder. Cover the blades of the blender or food processor with cold water or crushed ice before grinding. When finished, pour off excess water. Add two to three tablespoons white vinegar and a half teaspoon salt per cup of grated horseradish. Lemon juice could be used for a different flavor.

The timing for adding vinegar is critical to the degree of hotness. Vinegar stops the enzyme action and controls hotness. For a mild flavor, add vinegar immediately.
