Check inexpensive foods

With the economy struggling, nearly everyone is looking for ways to save money. It's important not to cut corners on nutrition, even when you're cutting back on the budget. Here are some reminders on how to buy inexpensive but nutritious food for your family.

Great (Whole) Grains
 Americans are encouraged to eat at least three servings of whole grains each day. For savings, buy whole grain cereals and pastas, brown rice, and other whole grains in bulk and store them. Buy whole grain bread products on sale, and freeze them for later use.

- Oatmeal - 7 cents per serving
- Popcorn - 7 cents per serving
- Brown rice - 15 cents per serving

Pennies for Protein
 Eggs and cooked dry beans are two of the least expensive protein sources. Toss cooked dry beans into salads and soups, mix them with pasta, add them to salsa, or puree them into dips.

- Eggs - 12 cents per serving
- Dry beans (cooked at home) - 10 cents per serving
- Canned beans - 33 cents per serving

Purchasing produce
 Dietary recommendations from MyPyramid call for most people to eat 4 to 6 cups of fruits and veggies each day. Shop for fresh seasonal produce, along with canned, frozen, dried fruit or 100% juice. All colorful fruits and vegetables are rich in nutrients.

- Frozen broccoli - 37 cents per serving
- Frozen peaches - 50 cents per serving

Decreasing your Dollars for Dairy
 • Milk in gallon or half-gallon cartons is usually less expensive per serving than milk sold in quarts or pints. Purchase the largest container that you can consume in 4 or 5 days.

- Pre-sliced and individually wrapped cheeses are usually more expensive per serving than a block of cheese.
- Yogurt in quart containers costs much less per serving than single-serving sizes.

There are many other money saving techniques that you may want to adapt.

Mother's Day 2009

To see you happy, laughing and joking, smiling and content, striving towards goals of your own, accomplishing what you set out to do, capable of loving and being loved, is what I always wanted for you.

Today I thought about your handsome face and felt the excitement you had for life and your genuine happiness and I, as your mother, burst with pride as I realized my dreams for you had come true. What an extraordinary person you had become. Please remember always how very much I love you.

"I love you.

I don't tell you enough, or call you enough, or visit enough . . . but I can honestly say, I could not love you any more than I already do."
