Investigation ongoing

A hit-and-run occurred last week when an unknown, maroon vehicle hit a young man in front of his home in Norton, according to the Norton Police Department.

The police report said Jordan Williams, 19, was walking on East Lincoln Street when a new model maroon car struck him in the hip without stopping. Mr. Williams said he was hit in front of his home.

"I was hit and thrown to the curb and blacked out," he said.

He said he wasn't going to report the accident but did after talking with his family.

He said he stumbled into his house to call 911. "I was dazed," Mr. Williams said.

Mr. Williams was taken to Norton County Hospital where X-rays were taken. He was released around 6 p.m. with bruises but no broken bones. He said the accident occurred around 2:30 p.m.

He said he still has some pain. Mr. Williams is new to Norton. He said he has lived here for two months and is originally from Colorado.

Police are continuing their investigation.

Have you ever wondered what things women carry in their purses? If so, you will see some evidence in the current displays shared by Ada Arfrod at the Norton Public Library.

Ada's display, Women's Purses and Their Contents, was inspired by a traveling exhibit at the Dane Hansen Museum in the summer of 2008.

Purses, dating from the 1800's through recent times, are a part of the display. Some are handmade, but most are store bought items. Purse styles have changed with fashion. Materials can be about anything depending on imagination and use—aluminum pop tabs, fabric, reptile skins, leather, beads or straw. Basic styles include bags with handles, those with shoulder straps and small clutch styles.

Purse contents run the gamut from the necessary such as money, makeup, handkerchiefs to the frivolous such as a cigarette holder.

One display case includes smoking accessories—match books, cigarette lighters and cigarette cases. Vanity items—comb, brush, hair pens and ornaments, rouge, lipstick, powder containers and compacts might be found in a purse. Small perfume bottles or perfume samples might also be important items. The finest piece in this collection is a monogrammed Elgin purse/compact in a black carrying case.

There was a time, before kleenex, when handkerchiefs were both useful and decorative. Check out the variety Ada has displayed. Head scarves were a must too. Like hankies, many are souvenirs today.

Check out the notes and books Ada has included.

In the art gallery you will be treated to a photography exhibit by Bill Bussen.

Bill developed his appreciation for the outdoors growing up as an avid hunter and fisherman in north-central Missouri. He purchased his first camera, a Brownie Hawkeye for $9.00 in 1953 while serving in the United States Army in Panama.

For several years, Bill was an amateur photographer taking mainly vacation and family photos. His move from amateur to professional photographer began 12 years ago, while scouting locations in preparation for turkey hunting.

Bill decided he would try to photograph turkeys while they descended from their roost in the trees, while he didn't get the turkey photo, it wasn't a wasted effort.

Bill took a picture of a beautiful wood duck, and when people expressed an interest in purchasing the picture, Outdoor Images was born.

Bill has exhibited at the Hansen Museum in Logan, the Kirwin National Wildlife Refuge, the Northwest Regional Library and the Great Bend Public Library.

Take time to enjoy a visit with wildlife as you study the photographs Bill has shared.

These exhibits will be on display at the Norton Public Library through the end of September.
