Crazy sales

Bev Wilken checked Crazy Day shoppers out in front of Hall's Clothing on Saturday. Steve Streck, store owner, said sales had been good and there were large crowds looking for sales in the early morning. —Telegram photo by Erica Bradley

August business in the spotlight

Business Name: Craig L. Krizek, DDS, FAGD
Address: 109 N. Kansas, Norton
Phone: 785-877-2801
Type of Business: Dental Office

Date Established: 1987
During dental school I was a fortunate recipient of a Dane G. Hansen scholarship which required that I practice in the northwestern part of the state.

Having grown up in the small town of Ellsworth, I had always wanted to practice in rural Kansas.

When Dr. John Travis' practice in Norton became available it was obvious that Norton would be a good fit.

These attributes are what attracted me to Norton; excellent schools, numerous active civic organizations, a diverse and active business community and quality of life.

Thanks in large part to a small business administration loan arranged by Chuck Kohfeld at First Security Bank and Trust, our practice opened on July 1, 1987.

Our greatest success has been the opportunity to serve the people of Norton and surrounding counties both professionally and personally over the past 22 years.

Recruitment of medical professionals to rural America will continue to be our greatest challenge.

Our vision for the future is to continue our tradition of service to the area.

Norton has been and will continue to be home to a business community that is forward-thinking and interconnected.

There are many examples of this type of civic cooperation with such success stories as the Norton County Fair and home-owned carnival, the Norton Theatre, the achievements of the Norton County Community Foundation with their efforts at the Washington Street Park, the Norton Public Library, the Norton County Museum, Norton Car Show, Fourth of July fireworks, just to name a few. Volunteering is critical to the vitality of any small town and this community continues to shine with this.
