Welcome Back to School!

New Teachers

My name is Alyssa Stites, and I will be teaching first and second grade in Lenora. I am originally from Phillipsburg, where I grew up on a farm. I graduated from Kansas State University in May with a degree in elementary education. My husband Travis and I will live in Phillipsburg. We just got married and are looking forward to living in the area.

My name is Amye Jones. I will work part time as a speech language pathologist for Norton pre-school. I have lived in the area most of my life, and I graduated from Norton Community High School. I attended Kansas State University where I received my bachelor's degree. I recently finished my master's degree in speech pathology.

My name is Angela Melvin. I will be teaching kindergarten in Lenora. I taught for eight years in Norton, but I began my career in Lenora. In Norton, I taught kindergarten, fourth grade and fifth grade. I have lived in Norton for 12 years, but I had taken some time off to finish my master's degree. I attended Fort Hays State University where I received my degree in teaching. I just finished my master's through Emporia State University in curriculum and instruction. I enjoy spending time with my husband and children.

My name is Crystal Montgomery, and I'll be teaching third grade at Eisenhower Elementary. I will also be the assistant tennis coach for the high school girls' team. I graduated from Colby High School and spent four years at Bethany College in Lindsborg, where I earned a bachelor's degree in elementary education. I played tennis all throughout high school and college where we made two trips to the National Championships. We were also Conference Champions all four years I was there. I was married in June to Shane Montgomery. We currently reside in Norton.
