Crazy but cozy cuisine to enjoy

Cook's Corner Liza Deines

Two cups curly parsley stripped off the stems

Two or three fresh basil leaves

One sprig fresh oregano

Two sprigs fresh marjoram

Teaspoon salt

Teaspoon pepper corns (more if you like)

Two or three cloves peeled garlic

Half a cup dark green olive oil

Mix all these ingredients in a blender, scraping parsley down off the sides as you go, just until combined well but still with a bit of texture.

One pound thin spaghetti

Two tablespoons butter (not oleo)

Half a cup grated or shredded Parmesan cheese (from a chunk, not a shaker)

Half a cup pine nuts, sunflower seeds or chopped pecans

Cook spaghetti as directed, drain and stir in butter and Parmesan cheese. Pour out into a large, deep platter, pour parsley sauce over all and top with the nuts.

Serves eight. Pine nuts are pretty expensive for this dish, but they were our favorite. Experiment with whatever nuts you might have on hand. My thanks to Marvin Stutheit for the fresh herbs.

We've all heard of black-eyed peas, but how many of you have had BLACK-EYED GREEN BEANS?

Open three cans of DelMonte French cut green beans, drain off liquid and spread them out in a buttered pie plate. Now a layer of sliced black olives goes over the beans. In your measuring cup whisk two tablespoons lemon juice, two tablespoons olive oil, a teaspoon garlic powder, a bit of Tabasco sauce and a snort of Worcestershire sauce. Pour the mixture over the beans and olives.

Cover tightly with foil and heat in a medium oven for 20 minutes. Just as you set the pan on the table place four triangles thin-sliced holey Swiss cheese on top. The black olive eyes will peek up through the holes and the green beans provide the bruises! Sounds weird but tastes yummy.

This recipe came from a Broadway Baptist Church cookbook and was served at their annual harvest festival dinner. The color is very festive.

BELIEVE IT OR NOT BEET SALAD :

One large can diced beets, drained with juice reserved for later

One small package lemon gelatin

Two thirds cup orange juice

Teaspoon seasoned salt

Tablespoon amber vinegar

Tablespoon finely grated onion

One cup celery, diced

Bring reserved beet juice to a boil, stir in gelatin, salt, vinegar, OJ, and onion. Chill until it begins to thicken (about 20 minutes or so) then fold in beets and celery. Chill and cut into squares to be served on a lettuce leaf topped with a blob of the following dressing. Mix one jar of Kraft pineapple cream cheese with just enough sour cream to smooth.

When browsing through vintage cookbooks, remember a recipe entitled "Grandma's" or "Mom's" doesn't necessarily guarantee success. Some mothers and even some grandmothers were lousy cooks, as my children, for some obscure reason, keep reminding me.

MY MAMA SAID: Try a new recipe on family first. If it fails they'll never let you forget it, but they will still be blood relatives.

CLUB NEWS

On Oct. 22, a cold and blustery night, 16 members of Mid-Century GFWC met at the home of Lois Myers with Doris Winteroth as co-hostess. Beverly Kindler, president, called the meeting to order. The theme of the meeting was "Keys To Sharing".

Thank you letters were read. They were from: Jerry Cummings, treasurer, of the Norton Ministerial Alliance, for the gift to the transient fund; from Doris Winteroth; from Shari Archer, president of the Coterie Club and from the Norton Country Home-Owned Carnival for our volunteering at the fair last fall. A letter was read from Rosetta McFarland, former member of Mid-Century, who is now living in Indiana.

Eunice thanked the group for all their work in delivering Meals-On-Wheels the last two weeks. Maxine Wiltfong reported that the Veterans project for the year has been completed. Following discussion, the Indian project will be a monetary gift to Eagle Butte Indian Reservation in South Dakota.

Bertie Leigh Compaan, vice president, presented to the club the Certificates of Achievement she had received for the club at the Sixth District Fall Convention that was held in Brewster. These are: Certificate of Achievement for excellence in Program Book Preparation, Certificate of Achievement for excellent programs in Public Affairs and Citizenship, Certificate of Achievement for excellent programs for International, Certificate of Achievement for excellent programs of fundraising, Certificate of Achievement for excellent programs in Conservation, Certificate of Achievement for excellent programs in Arts and Music, Certificate of Achievement for excellent programs in Home Life-helping Hands and Certificate of Achievement for excellent programs in Home

Life-Health.

Geraldine Packer gave a report from the GFWC Kansas Clubwoman. The GFWC Headquarters in Washington D.C. are designated as a National Historic Landmark.

The General Federation of Women's Clubs was founded in 1890 and is one of the largest and oldest nonpartisan, non-denominational women's volunteer service organizations. There are more than 100,000 members in clubs in every state and more than a dozen countries that work in their communities to support the arts, preserve natural resources, encourage civic involvement and work toward world peace and understanding. In 2006, GFWC and its members raised nearly $32 million to benefit more than 230,000 projects and volunteered more than 8.4 million hours.

Beverly reported on the GFWC Mississippi Valley Convention she had attended and also the International GFWC Convention held in Cleveland, Ohio.

The program for the evening was Operation Christmas Child. In 1993 Samaritan's Purse collected the first shoe boxes in North America for Operation Christmas Child. The idea of collection gift filled boxes for young war survivors in Bosnia sounded daunting, but presented an exciting opportunity to share the gospel. The first year 28,000 boxes were collected. Since then they have received close to 70 million gift filled boxes and delivered gift boxes to children in over 100 countries.

Roll call was answered with each group showing the shoe box that they had filled. Eight filled shoe boxes will be sent to Operation Christmas Child this year from Mid-Century GFWC.
