

Stop bullying behavior

“Common Sense Approach to Stop Bullying” by Joe Coles will be presented Monday, Oct. 25 at 7 p.m. at the East Campus auditorium.

The program is free and open to the public. The presentation is co-sponsored by the Norton Child Study Group and the Norton County Council on Drug and Alcohol Abuse, and the Norton schools.

Mr. Coles has been an educator for 31 years working as a teacher, counselor, athletic director and administrator. He has worked as a consultant for ten years presenting in schools, communities and conferences in the Midwest.

Bullying is not just a school problem. Children who bully others can turn into antisocial adults and are more likely than others to commit crimes, batter their spouses, abuse their children and produce another generation of children who bully.

Mr. Cole's presentation, “A Common Sense Approach to Stop Bullying Behavior” will present basic information on how to identify and recognize bullying behavior and strategies to redirect it, as well as how to handle bullying behavior as a witness, a victim, and a bully.

Joe Coles presented his “Knocking out Bullying behavior with Kindness” to the students of Norton Community Schools on Sept. 21.

“I present a different talk to different age groups, but I use the same power points,” said Coles after his presentation to the seventh and eighth grade students at Norton Junior High. Coles said, bullying is a problem and with the internet, it is evolving.

New displays have been set up at the Norton Public Library. The pictured collection is a portion of the 1800 bells that have been shared by Pearl Atkisson. Other exhibits are Reva Benien's White House Christmas Ornaments, Casey Meyers' handmade pottery and Norton Correctional Facility inmate quilts. The exhibits will be on display until December 31.

Unique exhibits are on display at library

By BEVERLY KINDLER

The holiday season will soon be here, and the new exhibits at the Norton Public Library are reminders.

Reva Benien has shared her collection of White House Christmas Ornaments. Each of the fourteen ornaments represents a President of the United States. Reva's collection came as gifts she has received.

The ornaments are a project of The White House Historical Association. Each ornament features a toy or artifact typical of the time of the presidency. Enclosed with the ornament is a folder that gives facts about the president, his presidency and social life in the White House.

One example is the rocking horse ornament, which represents the presidency of Ulysses S. Grant. The rocking horse was a toy that was typical of that time in history.

The ornaments are available for sale through their website. The funds are used for the acquisition and preservation of historical furnishings and artwork that are a part of the permanent White House collection.

Take time to examine the details of each of the ornaments.

In the tall display case, Casey Meyers has displayed pottery she has made. In 1993, she took her first pottery class in Gillette, Wyo.

Since then she has participated in courses and summer workshops in Sheridan and Casper, and at Colorado Springs and Arvada.

Since Casey and her family moved to Kansas 10 years ago, she has continued to produce pottery part time, but recently transitioned into full time production of functional and decorative ware. The pieces she has displayed are for sale and she has pieces on sale at Attitudes Restaurant.

Pearl Atkisson, originally from Stockton, is displaying a small part of her collection of 1,800 bells. Pearl's collection fills display cases and shelves in her home. She started her collection about 1960 and has acquired the bells at auctions, garage sales, gift shops and as gifts. Her favorite bell is a large church bell which was a gift from her husband.

Pearl has bells from nearly every state and from Puerto Rico and Mexico. One of the most unique is one from Hawaii that is a replica of one used near Buddha Temples. The bells are made from metal, crystal, wood and porcelain.

Pearl currently lives in Norton with her daughter, Mary Lou Atkisson.

Take time to examine the details of the bells in the large flat display case.

In the art gallery, you will find an exhibit of nine colorful quilts made by inmates at Norton Correctional Facility. The inmates on the laundry crew began making quilts using scraps of material to make laundry bags, aprons and other items for use in the prison. Soon, they began producing quilts to be donated to organizations in the community. Fifty quilts have been made since March 2008 and were donated to the Andbe Home, the Haven and other organizations.

The inmates started by using old pieces of clothing from local thrift shops. Now they are developing their designs using donated fabrics. They have one sewing machine, but would like one that would sew heavier fabric. They would also like to get a quilting frame.

In the display, you will see a variety of designs that have been used. Some are quilted, some are tied but each one is unique and colorful.

Donations of fabric, design and sewing books and other sewing supplies can be provided by contacting E. Schukman at the Norton Correctional facility. These donations will help the program to continue.

Take time to examine and enjoy each of these unique displays at the Norton Public Library. They will be displayed through December 31.

A musical family group will perform for you

The Kid Fiddlers, a family group of musicians, will perform at the Oberlin Gateway Center at 7:30 p.m. on Saturday, Oct. 23.

The Henderson, Nev. group has been amazing audiences around the world since 2001. They combine a mastery of over a dozen instruments, impeccable vocal harmonies, fantastic clogging and charming humor. It is a family friendly show suitable for all ages.

It is said that when “Mom” takes the stage with her five amazingly talented kids ages 7 to 19, audiences are spellbound. What makes these kids so special is that they don't just play music for fun or to entertain, they are using their talents to raise money for important causes including the American Cancer Society and the American Diabetes Association.

The family includes mother Toni Jackson, Tess, Grayden, Mikinzie, Zach, and Skyler.

This is an Oberlin Arts and Humanities Commission season ticket event or $10 for adults; and $5 for students grades 1-12 at the door.

For information call Ella Betts, (785) 475-3557 or Mary Henzel (785) 470-0218.
