

OBITUARIES

Larry Mizer

March 16, 1927 - November 16, 2010

Larry L. Mizer, died at his residence in Jennings on Nov. 16 at the age of 83. He was born on March 16, 1927, in Jennings, to Donald and Millie (Carlson) Mizer.

Larry was raised five miles south of Jennings and attended Jennings Schools. He graduated from Jennings High School in 1945. He was in the United States Army during World War II. He married Alice Germeroth on July 31, 1961 in Norton. The couple made their home on the family farm near Jennings where he was a farmer and rancher. They moved into Jennings in 1983. Larry was a member of the United Methodist Church in Jennings and the American Legion.

He was preceded in death by his parents; son, Jim Foster and sister, Enid Mizer.

Survivors include his wife, Alice, Jennings; sons, Gary Foster, Berryville, Va., Don (Peggy) Foster, Aberdeen, S.D. and Max Mizer (Kathy Tacha) of Jennings; daughter, Barbara Herl, Pleasanton, Calif.; seven grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held Saturday, Nov. 20 at 11 a.m. at the Jennings United Methodist Church with Rev. Barbara Patterson officiating. Burial will be in the Jennings Cemetery. A memorial has been established in his name. Visitation will be today from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. at the Pauls Funeral Home in Oberlin and Saturday from 8 a.m. until service time at the church. Condolences may be left at www.paulsfh.com.

Arrangements are by Pauls Funeral Home of Oberlin.

Potatoes are not all alike

Have you ever wondered what kinds of potatoes are best for boiling, mashing, frying and baking?

Potatoes are versatile creatures, aren't they? They can be cooked just about any way you can think of, and they complement almost any meal.

There are more than 200 kinds of potatoes. Although you won't find all of those varieties at your supermarket, it's easy to get confused about the different sorts of potatoes that are available.

Potatoes may fall into one of two categories, "waxy" or "mealy" or somewhere in between. Those terms hardly make the mouth water, but they do offer a good way to discern which potatoes are best for different uses.

"Mealy" potatoes have more dry starch within their cells, which tend to puff up and separate from each other when cooked. That makes the potato fluffier when cooked, a good thing for baking and mashing. It also makes the potato drier, which is okay, because you generally moisten baked and mashed potatoes with butter, milk or other moisteners. This type is also good for frying potatoes, think of the fluffy interior of a thick-cut french fry. The Russet potato, the most popular potato by far in the United States, is the classic "mealy" potato.

Instead of separating when cooked, the cells in "waxy" potatoes stick together. That's good news when you want a potato to hold its shape after cooking, as you would want for potato salads, boiled potatoes or scalloped potatoes. New potatoes (which are really just young potatoes of any variety), red-skinned potatoes and fingerlings are common varieties of waxy potatoes.

Still other potatoes fall in between mealy and waxy. These all-purpose potatoes have a medium starch content and can be used for just about all purposes. Round and long white-skinned potatoes are usually classified as "all purpose."

Potatoes, particularly those that aren't fried or laden with high-fat trimmings, can be a nutritious component of the diet. They are high in vitamin C and a good source of potassium and vitamin B6.

But be careful, they're so well-loved that it's easy to go overboard on them. A small-to-medium-sized baked potato, about 5.25 ounces, is plenty for one serving.

If you have questions about potatoes or other vegetables, please feel free to contact your local K-State Research and Extension Office.

Stanton Nelson, a sophomore Piano Performance major at the University of Kansas, was one of three finalists selected during the Fort Hays State University Young Artist Competition held Nov. 13.

Stanton Nelson

The three winners will be featured with the Hays Symphony Orchestra at the Beach Schmidt Performing Arts Center on the campus of Fort Hays State University on Saturday, Feb. 12, 2011 at 7:30 p.m.

Fourteen members of the Norton Community High School KAY Club attended the Area 4 Regional Conference Nov. 10 in Osborne. KAY stands for Kansas Association for Youth.

The conference theme was "There's No Place Like Kansas," and gave students an opportunity for them and their sponsors to share successes and challenges, and exchange ideas.

Those attending were Emily Schulze, Spencer Shirk, Sierra

Black, Bryan Henry, Jude Braun, Katelyn Engelbert, Bekah Streck, Dakota Dreher, Nicquel McVey, Melissa Byler, Erin Terrell, Alexis Henson, Alec Melvin and Julia Kent. Club sponsors Nicole Satran and Erin Manning accompanied the group.

Bryan Henry was elected Area 4 president representing the 25 schools in the area. The High School Kay Club is proud to have Bryan representing the area schools.

The Club received the Gold Award recognizing their student leadership and service to their school, community, nation and world for the 2009-10 school year.

The Club is a character building, leadership training program directed by the Kansas State High School Activities Association.

The organization provides students an opportunity to learn to assume their citizenship responsibilities and to enrich their personalities through well organized programs that emphasize four areas of service: school, community, nation and world.

The KAY area project purchased three recycling containers for East Campus and the gyms. The theme was going green.

December projects for KAY citizenship week are: Nation, collecting items to send to the troops; Community, collecting cans for God's Pantry; World, sponsoring a child in Africa.
