Bridge tournament

The numbers were fewer but it was the same friendly atmosphere as ten of the area's finest teams gathered for round one of the twenty second annual Norton National Bridge Tournament. High gas prices, golf tournaments, lost partners and numerous other reasons limited the field, but the competition was at the same high level as in tournaments past.

The format was changed slightly from four rounds of six hands to four rounds of four hands to shorten the time element which seemed to fit most everyone. As in most card games that includes biding and a trump suit, those who win the bid have the most chance of success; however there are limitations as those who over bid must pay a penalty and in the game of Bridge, that is a most common event.

It was no surprise that after round one the scores were pretty even but as the evening wore on the scores began to spread, sometimes due to good and not so good cards and the communication between partners in the bidding process. In the game of Bridge, the ultimate is to bid the highest possible which is called a slam (taking all of the tricks possible or all but one) and even though there were some who made all of the tricks, none were bid which is a requirement.

By the end of the evening there was a great spread in scores between the highest and the lowest. The top five teams in order were; 1. Jack and Dave Graham with 4,670 points; 2. Mary Jane Wahlmeier and Jackie Porter, 3,490; 3. Weldon Brooks and Norman Nelson, 3,050; 4. Willie and Marcia Wiltfong, 2650; 5. Alberta Slaby and Carla Latimer, 2,200. Last year's champions, Bob Jones and sister Carla Latimer, scored 5,410 points in round one, but that was with four rounds of six hands each. Other teams playing in random order were; Joyce Sumner and Norman Walter; Joe and Jake Durham; Ruth Durham and Dorothy Avery; Myron Veh and Shirley Erbert; Norma Howorth and Beverly Klein.

Merris Brooks substituted for Joe Durham and Norma Howorth and Beverly Klein played for team ten. Round 2 will began Thursday May 19.

Rules that make you sick

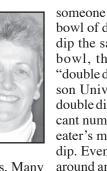

Has someone you know ever used the "five second rule" with dropped food, or double-dipped a food into a shared bowl? Did you know that studies have determined how many bacteria are transferred at these time?

Five Second Rule: Have you ever heard that dropped food will not be contaminated if it's picked up within five seconds? This 'rule' is totally false! Researchers at Clemson University studied bread and sausage dropped onto tile, wood and carpet. They found that a large number of bacteria were transferred to both of these foods when they were dropped onto any of the three types of floors, Another Clemson University study found that double dipping transfers a significant number of bacteria from the eater's mouth into the remaining dip. Even if people turn the food around and dip with the part their mouths haven't touched yet, the bacteria on their fingers contaminate the food and then the dip.

Corn is second

vkmelia@yahoo.com

Survey after survey shows very clearly that tomatoes are the garden vegetable of choice in all parts of the United States of America. Nearly 95 percent of all the nation's gardeners plant and nurture tomatoes in their backyard gardens. Some are even grown in the front yard, carefully located among the petunias and the marigolds or any other bedding plant. Lots of sunshine, good fertility, and timely additions of water are about the only ingredients necessary to growing a tomato crop.

Do you know what the SEC-OND most favorite garden vegetable is in America? Actually, it isn't really a vegetable. It's sweet corn! Everyone from youngsters with a few teeth to oldsters with a few teeth simply adore sweet corn. But here's the kicker! Less than half of all backyard gardeners in America actually GROW sweet corn themselves. Most gardeners depend on the farmer's market or country friends with a two acre corn patch to obtain their sweet corn fix. The reason most gardeners give for not growing their own is "I just don't have room for it out there."

Despite a perceived shortage of space, sweet corn will produce well in the backyard, especially when planted in "blocks" instead of rows so that the pollination process is enhanced. Sweet corn is pollinated by the wind and not by bees as are most other garden

But just about everyone loves sweet corn. Do you know anyone who refuses to eat it? I don't either, and we just can't seem to get enough of it during the summer season.

The nice thing about sweet corn is that it just gets better and better. New developments in cross-breeding some of the SE, SU, and Sh2 types has resulted in an almost unbelievably sweet and tender product, without sacrificing true sweet corn flavor. In the forefront of this type of advancement is a trademarked variety of sweet corn named Mirai, (pronounced ME-rye.). It is an altogether different type of sweet corn called "synergistic" and Mirai isn't the only one in this class...just the most well known right now, and the one that carries the most hype, as well as the best distribution.

Mirai sweet corn was developed in 1954 at Twin Gardens Farms located near Harvard, Ill. by George Ahrens and his family.

He experimented for years on his 200 acre farm where he grew mostly vegetables for the farmer's market and moonlighted as a truck driver. His experimental work has paid off, and today, the Japanese buy most of his available seed. The Japanese actually gave the corn it's name which means "the taste of the future."

The Ahrens family has added an adjacent 200 acres to their farm, and just about every acre is planted to Mirai. The crop is picked by hand so as not to injure the tender kernels that might occur with a mechanical picker, and they have developed a large mail order market.

This will be my third year of planting Marai, and I plant a yellow variety as well as a bicolor variety. It is, indeed, the best sweet corn I have ever grown. In a few years, I'm sure there will be a better one!
