interested in fighting Medicare and Medicaid fraud. The Senior Medicare Patrol is a federally funded national endeavor created to help Medicare and Medicaid beneficiaries protect, detect and report health care fraud. Since its inception in 1997, the Senior Medicare Patrol is credited with saving taxpayers more than $100 million.

Volunteers serve a vital role in the Senior Medicare Patrol program. Each volunteer receives extensive training which includes the patrol's mission, Medicare basics, and how to recognize and report Medicare fraud. Upon completion, volunteers will have the tools and support needed to assist seniors in the community, protect their personal information, detect suspicious activities and report their concerns. The Senior Medicare Patrol or email: Nikki.Noe@aging. asks volunteers to serve in a ks.gov. number of ways. Opportunities include activities that range from distributing materials such as brochures, flyers, and handouts to activities that allow volunteers to meet with beneficiaries and answer simple questions or to connect them with the right person to answer more complex questions. Patrol staff will meet with volunteers individually to ensure that volunteers are given an opportunity to serve in a capacity that fits their time, interest, location and strengths. Northwest Kansas Area Agency on Aging is currently accepting applications to be reviewed and processed by the Kansas Department on Aging Senior Medicare Patrol. To obtain a copy of the application please contact Glenna Clingingsmith at 785-628-8204 or Nikki Noe, Senior Medicare Patrol Program Administrator at 785-296-0377

Try something new in the garden

vkmelia@yahoo.com

I have this longtime gardening habit of planting something new each year. For whatever reason. It's kinda fun to go off the deep end and attempt to grow something that is unfamiliar to me due to different tastes or unusual growing habit. The challenge is the thing, and garden space is not a problem other than I have too much of it. I planted celery one year. Grew about a dozen nice large stalks of it, but it never blanched from dark green to white and was as tough as a large rope. I never tried it again although it was fun starting the little transplants.

Last summer, I successfully grew Waltham Butternut squash for the first time, after years of talking and writing about it. Squash is a bit far out for me but I can tolerate winter squash, and Waltham Butternut was excellent tasting and easy to grow. I've even grown tomatillos, popcorn, Malabar spinach, parsnips, (yum), Fava beans, habanero peppers, and radicchio. I've never planted arugula or edible chrysanthemums.

I know you can hardly wait to hear about my choice for this year's garden! I made the tough decision early in January after studying all those seed catalogs very closely. This year, drum roll please, I will plant.....HEAD LETTUCE!! How exciting is

Please understand that I always plant and enjoy a short row of leaf lettuce and we thoroughly enjoy the many different shapes and colors that leaf lettuce presents us. Flavor? Not much. And so we add great gobs of different consistencies of dressings as we search for a reason to serve the stuff in the first place.

But head lettuce? I have always understood that it was difficult, if not impossible, to grow head lettuce in a normal backyard garden in this area because of overly warm summer temperatures. But I discovered an article in an old 1985 home gardening publication that told me I could do it. The secret seems to be that you plant very early, thus escaping the heat of summer which most lettuce types will not tolerate.

Head lettuce is one of four different families of lettuce. There is the aforementioned Leaf Lettuce, and also Romaine, Loosehead, and Crisphead. Head lettuce is a crisphead type and probably the most familiar of the foursome since we have access to Iceberg year around at the supermarket. There is, of course, no "crunchiness" to leaf lettuce and as a result, our homegrown salads tend to lack "body" despite the nice colors and the freshness. Maybe the crispness of head lettuce can provide that need as well as sandwich accompaniments.

With any type of head lettuce, you must start the plants inside and early in order to get good growth and early maturity before the heat sets in. I've chosen a variety of head lettuce called Calmar. It is described as one that has a strong resistance to heat, which it will certainly need in our area. So, I'll start the seeds inside, get some growth on them, and then set the transplants outside very early. To do so, I'll need to plant the seeds inside about.....uh oh..NOW!!! Gotta go! See you next week!

HANSEN MUSEUM

The Dane G. Hansen Memorial Museum presents two exhibits simultaneously: "The Bales will be made. Polly will runs through noon and then State of Kansas Historical Mube present for the presentation. from 1-4 p.m. If interested, call ral" by Dennis Schiel of Hays, and "Maxwell Berry's Wildflower Photography." These exhibits opened on March 16 and will run through April 15. Both of these exhibits are quite educational. Come in and learn some new information about Kansas that you had not previously known.

"The State of Kansas Historical Mural" consists of 10 three by four foot panels. Each panel contains historical subjects that pertain to the panel's coverage area. This mural has over 300 historical subjects covering the people, animals, landscape, trails, railroads and historical sites from the State of Kansas. Dennis Schiel's ultimate goal was to have painted a State Mural with historical content second to none. "If one picture says a thousand words, I can't imagine the number of words created with this Mural."

"Maxwell Berry's Wildflower Photography," which he donated in the mid-seventies, consists of over 100 framed photographs. Dr. Berry's hobby was photography and he was fascinated with the beauty of the Kansas prairie flower. Using a single lens Reflex 35 mm camera and a 50 mm macro-lens, Berry photographed wildflowers in Greenwood County, where he was born, and also Wilson and Woodson counties in Kansas. This collection has shown periodically in the past and we are pleased once again to share this exhibit with the public. The annual meeting will be held Sunday, April 15 at 2 p.m. in the Dane G. Hansen Commu-
