HANSEN MUSEUM

By LEE FAVRE, director
The new "Reeds and Wool" exhibition has settled in and not only gives the gallery a new look and feel, but a new smell as well.

Yup, there is an odor in the gallery that we have been trying to identify. Is it the aging grass reeds used in the Kyrgyz reed screens on display from Central Asia or could it be the sheep or goats wool with which each reed is woven?

The exhibit shares a tiny part of the Kryrgyz lifestyle and brings a bit of their life to our tiny spot on the globe. As a nomadic people, beauty was found in the making of their portable reed screens. Used for space dividers within their yurt (dwelling) or to block the winds or cold, these reed screens were embellished with intricate patterns and designs woven by master chiy makers. Eleven screens and four felt or wool rugs may be seen in this exhibit from the Kauffman Museum.

The Kaye Franklin painting workshop took place with 18 students. Offered by the Hansen Museum's Continued Education program, this workshop leaned towards the training of advanced and professional artists. Kaye Franklin traveled from Graham, Texas to instruct this three-day workshop.

Last Thursday, approximately 20 board members from the Stockton, Phillipsburg and Logan Coops met for an evening meeting. A marketing seminar, conducted by F. C. Stone LLC, followed a full course meal catered by Ruth Bigge.

Tammy McClellan still shows her custom-made jewelry throughout the month of October.
