Pauline Luella Hixon

June 22, 1922 - Dec. 4, 2007 Pauline Luella Hixon died on Dec. 4, 2007, in Aurora, Colo., at the age of 85. She was born in Norton, Kan., on June 22, 1922, to Henry and Florence Shaw. On June 29, 1941, she was married to Charles F. "Chick" Hixon.

Pauline and "Chick" moved the family to St. Francis from Norton in April of 1950 to work for G.J. Raile Grocery. Seven years later the Hixons bought the store and operated it as the Ideal Super Market. In 1963, the store was expanded and relocated to its present location on the corner of Washington and Benton. Following her husband's death in January 1979, Pauline continued to operate the store with the help and assistance of a group of loyal and dedicated employees until she retired in Jan-

Mary Margaret Rodgers Jewell

March 3, 1916 - Jan. 7, 2007 Mary Margaret Rodgers Jewell was born March 3, 1916, in Cincinnati, Ohio, to Roland Weston and Clara Smith Rodgers of Amberly Village. She died Jan. 7, 2007, in Cushing, Okla.

There is a sense of history in Mary Margaret's death. She was the last of six generations born and raised on the farm in Amberly Village that her ancestor, Andrew Rodgers, founded in 1798 as a land grant in the Northwest Territories of Ohio after the Revolutionary War. Branches of her family date to the Mayflower, and one Phillip Livingston of New York, served on the committee that drafted the Declaration of Independence.

Mary Margaret was raised on Rodgers Fruit Farm, at the corner of Ridge and Galbraith roads, which her father, Roland, had transformed from an ordinary local farm to a prosperous fruit farm after graduating in horticulture from Ohio State. She attended Pleasant Ridge Presbyterian Church (her father was an elder at the church), Withrow High School, Ohio Wesleyan and Kansas State colleges, and completed graduate study in igan in Ann Arbor in 1939.

She married Ross Jewell in 1939. They had two sons, David and Ralph.

Mary Margaret had one older sister, Elizabeth, who died in infancy before Mary Margaret was born.

Among people with whom Mary Margaret has sustained lifelong correspondence (since grade school), and who may be in attendance at the grave-site on Saturday are Ruth Schmutter of Crooksville, Rosie Pugh of Cincinnati and Flo Bley also of Cincinnati and a member of Pleasant Ridge Presbyterian Church. Helen Doerring, Mary Margaret's cousin from Columbus, who will play taps at the funeral services, has been a correspondent with Mary Margaret for years. Mary Margaret comes from a generation of people who stayed in contact by mail and corresponded regularly, and, by doing so, she maintained her roots in Ohio and Cincinnati.

Mary Margaret met Ross at Kansas State College in Manhattan where he was a veterinary student and she was finishing a liberal arts degree. She completed work in dietetics at University of Michigan while she waited for Ross to finish his Doctor of Veterinary Medicine degree at Kansas State. They were married in the living room at Rodgers Fruit Farm in September 1939, and travelled right away to Arkansas and Kansas, as Ross was employed by the Federal Department of Animal Husbandry to inoculate cattle against bangs

In 1941, Ross began a master's degree at Ohio State University in Columbus, a boon to Mary Margaret whose maternal relatives, Thornton and Lot Smith, lived nearby in Canal Winchester.

During the Second World War, Mary Margaret gave birth to David (1942) and Ralph (1945) at Good Samaritan Hospital. Although Mary Margaret and Ross lived in Columbus at the time, they came home to help operate the farm, particularly after her father was stricken with asthma, and her mother died in 1944 or 45.

After the war, Ross accepted a position on the veterinary faculty at Kansas State College; Mary Margaret and the family moved to Manhattan and began her 62-year absence from the family home-

In 1947, she contracted tuberculosis, which meant a 13-month stay in a tuberculosis sanatorium and the loss of one lung. Mary Margaret feared that she wouldn't live to see her 2- and-5-year-old children reach adulthood; antibiotics had not yet been introduced for tuberculosis, which was very often a killer. She far surpassed her goal living another 60 years.

Ross changed professions and attended medical school in the early 1950s and the family moved several times following him through school, internship and practice in several small Kansas towns. Wherever she went, Mary Margaret established new roots, made friends and contributed to the community.

Her father died in 1959, at their home in Bird City, and Mary Margaret sold her portion of Rodgers Fruit Farm. It became the site of Adath Israel Reform Congregation. There is a mind's-eye picture of Roland, her father, standing on the back steps of the farmhouse with an arrowhead found in the fields in one hand, and looking at the temple, which rises where the barn once stood. He reflects on the native people who came before; on his family's six generations of stewardship to that site; and on the congregation that followed, and seems satisfied that the land continues, as it always has, to serve its residents well.

As the boys graduated from school, Mary Margaret made it her business to reclaim her individuality as well as holding the family together. She re-certified as a dietician, contracted with a number of small hospitals and nursing homes in northwest Kansas, Colorado and Nebraska, and tootled around the region in her bright orange Karmann-Ghia inspecting facilities and dispensing wisdom, training, menus and advice. She built a career that lasted until Ross retired in 1985, and they relocated to Cushing.

In Cushing, at her memorial service, 45 people attended, attesting to Mary Margaret's continuing ability to make friends and develop relationships as she grew older. She sustained her church ties, participated actively in the quilting society, making and giving away scores of handmade quilts of all sizes to family and friends, became a mentor to several school children over the years, and participated actively with older adults at Senior Action in Cushing. She cared for Ross in his 80s, and remained a solid ally to both her boys in all their struggles and endeavors.

Mary Margaret is survived by two sons, three grandchildren, and a scattered, extended family of relatives and friends that she stayed in correspondence with in Ohio, Kansas, Washington, California, Texas, Florida and Hawaii.

Mary Margaret was buried in the graveyard of Pleasant Ridge Presbyterian Church. as she requested, with her family, and close to her ancestors beginning with Andrew, whose 1814 limestone marker at the other end of the aisle is almost washed clean of text. She is along side of two centuries of Irish-Presbyterian kinfolk who settled and helped to develop the Ohio River

The director of nursing was present at the Thursday, Jan. 24, Cheyenne County Hospital Board meeting to tell about her job and du-

ing, told the board that she is in charge of all patient care. "I like this job because there are new challenges every day," she said. "Changes happen rapidly and it is important to be flex-The new patient room furniture and bed lifts have made a positive impact at the hospital, she said. Traci Neitzel, board member, asked if she had sufficient staff?

Mrs. Lee said that right now, the hospital is in kind of a "crunch" and another registered nurse may need to be hired. The hospital presently has seven fulltime registered nurses; three fulltime licensed practical nurses; seven certified nurses aides; one nursing aide; and two certified nursing aides working in other areas of the hospital.

Jane Young, board member, asked if pool nurses were used? Mrs. Lee said a few have been used in the past year but, routinely, they don't need them.

Mrs. Lee pointed out that the hospital staff is well trained, listing several advanced certifications that have been attained by an unusually high percentage of

Mr. Lacy said that Mrs. Lee does not routinely schedule herself for work, but, instead, backs up the schedule and fills in when and where she is needed.

Kari Gilliland, board member, commented that Mrs. Lee has a calm, efficient way of running the hospital.

Mrs. Lee has been with the hospital for 6 years and has been director of nurses for 2 years.
