

Fifth graders dress for performance

Lynette Nolan's fifth grade students dress in costume to perform several poems. Poems included "A Conversion on the Edge of War," and "The Midnight Ride of Paul Revere."

Learning the poems took some time and effort. However, dressing up, finding their costumes and performing in them were the "frosting on the cake." Many will undoubtedly remember the poem and what they wore for many years to come.

This is an annual event for fifth graders
