"With the help of several county historical societies and interested individuals, we hope to present an interesting program," Mr. Reinert concluded.

More about the line

Riding the stage coach 687 miles would have been anything but comfortable. Besides passengers, it also carried the mail.

John Jones and William Russell organized the Leavenworth and Pike's Peak Express Stage Company in 1859, but it only ran for 18 months. However, it was instrumental in helping begin settlements of points west of Junction City and is part of a colorful history in northwest Kansas and southwest Nebraska.

Research has been done, and locations of the 27 stage stations can still be found, and with a little imagination, stage "ruts" are still visible today.

Horace Greeley, well-known editor for the new York Tribune and politician, rode the stage through Rawlins County. The northwest Kansas prairie land made a lastand he wrote about the desolation of the land.

"I would match this station and its surroundings against any other scene on our continent for desolation," Mr. Greeley wrote.

He also told about Indians frightening the mules pulling the stage. The animals set off on a run, the coach was upset and Mr. Greeley had been injured.

Twenty-five years ago, an active group of historians conducted a successful re-enactment of a stage and mail run across Kansas Territory. Local historians will present this year's program as a followup of the successful re-enactment during May of 1984, called "Operation Mailbag."

where members meet for breakfast and a drive," he said.

The Klies enjoy the trips and getting together with friends.

'We try to make the trip around four times a year," he said.

In 2001, the club hosted the Vintage Triumph Register in Breckenridge, Colo., and between 350 and 400 Triumphs came from all over the United States. Bob said he spent a lot of his time adjusting carburetors for the high altitude.

This was a big event. There was a breakfast run to the top of the mountain; a party at a ski lodge on the mountain. A "funkhana" found the cars and drivers performing obstacles in a parking lot. At one time, about 200 of the cars and owners stopped for a photo. There was a reception and many tours around Breckenridge. At the end of the event was a ceremony and the "People's Choice" award was presented.

The club is planning another Register in 2011.

When they are not going to the gaggles, the Klies are attending car shows. They took first at the Conclave Car Show in Denver; and took second at the Norman, Okla., and Champaign, Ill., car

Mr. Klie is planning to retire from restoring British cars as soon as he finishes repairing or restoring the seven cars already lined up. Right now, there are British-made cars from Grand Junction, Tribune, Englewood and Golden waiting in his shop to be repaired. One is a complete restoration, others have minor tune ups or motor and/or transmission overhauls.

"I want to do something different," he said.

"Different" is working on vintage caterpillars. He has restored one which belonged to his dad and has another one lined up.

In the past few years, there have been a number of gas wells installed in the area and he has been repairing motors on the wells.

The Klies are firm believers in organic farming and eating. They have changed over completely to organic farming. He is growing organic wheat, oats, cane, milo, barley and millet. This is the fifth year for raising cattle that are fed only organic-grown feed.

A member of the High Plains Food Coop, he has a market for the crops and cattle. He sells grains most to the front range but will soon be shipping wheat to North Carolina. There may also be a market for the beef in California.

People, he said, are wanting to get away from the chemicals found in food.

In between time, he may want to rebuild another Triumph.

The Klies plan to have their Triumph on display at the St. Francis car show on May 9. Stop by and see their car along with all the other British-made cars that will be on display. They are a unique car that could be a rarity in the future.

Postal rates go up

On May 11, the price for a 1-ounce firstclass mail stamp will increase from 42 to 44 cents.

Customers said Dewayne Lalicker, postmaster, reminds customers that they can continue to mail letters at today's prices by purchasing their Forever stamps before May 11.

Thursday, April 30, 2009

That's why Forever stamps were created, he said, to help consumers ease the transition during price changes.

Prices for other mailing services such as standard mail, periodicals, package service (including singlepiece parcel post)), and special services will also change on May 11. The average increase by class of mail is at or below the rate of inflation as measured by the Consumer Price Index, he said. For the average household, the first-class mail stamp price change will represent an additional $3 over the course of the year. "When compared to annual increases in other household expenses, such as groceries, healthcare and utilities, the postal service continues to be an economical choice for shipping and mail during tough eco-

Saint Francis Herald 9

For first-class mail, there will be no changes in the current additional-ounce price, which remains

Rising operational costs, he said, make the price adjustments necessary. Prices for mailing services are reviewed annually and adjusted each May. Prices for most shipping services, including express mail and priority mail, were adjusted in January and will not change in May.
