Margaret Schultz

Dec. 2, 1919 - Oct. 20, 2010

Margaret was born in Cheyenne calming force. County, Kan., to James B. and Emma Sine Wickwar and was the first of seven children.

In 1937, she met Henry Schultz while attending various barn dances, ball games, and plays. On Feb. 1, 1940, they were united in marriage. To this marriage four children were born, Sharon Kay, Stanley Lynn (deceased), Janice Rae and Sandra Sue.

In 1945, they relocated the family to the Walz place where they farmed for 39 years. Initially they did ranching and farming. Henry decided to focus strictly on farming and expanded his farming efforts to over 2,000 acres. In 1983, she and Henry moved to Wray and continued farming until 1985, at which time, Henry's brother, Rueben took over the farming for another four years.

Margaret was hard working, always helping with the farm in every way...gardening, raising children and canning. She was a loving and caring wife, mother, grandmother, and greatgrandmother, always putting others needs ahead of her own. Margaret was known for her excellent cooking and baking skills and was always willing to make in Wray, Colo. sticky buns whenever her grandchildren wanted them.

Margaret always loved music cis. and going to dances. If music

Arlene Peter

Dec. 2, 1919 - Oct. 20, 2010

Dec. 2, 1919, and died on Oct. gers were keeping time. In her born to Lester and Mattie (Brooks) Confer on Dec. 9, 1929, at the family farm west of St. Francis, Kan. Arlene was their only child and she lived and learned, and grew up during the Dirty 30s. The family moved to Oregon where they tried to make a living with the rest of Lester's family, only to move back "home" to Kansas. She was a child when Lester owned, operated and hauled ice from the Confer Ice Plant and it was from him that Arlene learned how to milk and feed the dairy cows. It was from her mother, Mattie, that Arlene learned the arts of sewing, cooking and entertaining everyone, from out-of-town guests to neighbors, farmers and pheasant hunters.

She graduated from the St. Francis Community High School with the class of 1947.

On May 16, 1948, Arlene married Elmer Nash. They were blessed with two daughters, Glenda in 1950 and Peggy in 1951. In June of 1953, Peggy died.

Elmer and Arlene owned and operated a livestock hauling business for several years. Long before women truckers were part of the "norm," Elmer was often heard to say that Arlene was the best truck driver he ever had.

On July 24, 1964, Arlene became the wife of Royce Edward Peter. Throughout their life together they were inseparable, where she was he was and where he was she was, whether it was clearing the land, planting, watering and harvesting the crops, or cooking for a huge crowd at the Fly-In, or entertaining a group of friends.

Together they watched their children, Glenda, Greg and Peg, mature into adults and they attended all their children's athletic and social events. They married them off and then welcomed their grandkids with great pride. She also had "extra" grandchildren as the kids at Glenda's daycare considered her "Grandma 'Lene." Arlene accepted, welcomed and supported the spouses of all her children and grandchildren, as is evidenced by their knowing they too were subject to her reprimands, and she never hesitated to tell someone what to do, when to do it, and how to do it.

Royce and Arleen traveled to Texas every winter to spend time with Greg and his family, stopping in Wichita along the way to visit Peg and her's. They went to fish and she could out-fish Royce on the best, and the worst, of days. up in her stubbornness and decided she could do it and continued driving to Texas, living in the your precious memories. home she and Royce had lovingly

Arlene Joyce (Confer) Peter was built on the lake. She also enjoyed the special friends she developed and her church family. Arlene searched her heart and soul long and hard before deciding to sell that home a couple of years ago.

Declining health the last two years kept Arlene home and hospital bound, but she managed to travel to San Antonio for her grandson, Chad's wedding to Annie and was much anticipating a trip to Houston in March for grandson, Justin and Megan's

She loved the thrift store and the coffee shop and heaven forbid if she got company or a phone call at 9:45 on any day that kept her from being there at 10 sharp. She worked at soup suppers and was a valued member of every club she belonged to. She was a Girl Scout leader, an avid bowler, golfer, trucker, farmer, mom, grandma, friend, and as someone said recently, "a grand lady."

She died at her home on Sunday, Oct. 17, 2010, as she was getting ready for her 8:30 a.m. church service. She was ready for this moment.

Her service was held at the United Methodist Church where her friend and pastor, Morita Truman officiated.

She was preceded in death by her mother, Mattie Brooks; stepmother, Gladys Confer; her daughter, Peggy Nash; her husband, Royce Peter, and her grandson, Bobby Krien.

Left to mourn her passing are her 101-year-old father, Lester Confer; daughters and husbands, Glenda and Gaylord Krien and Peggy and Bob Gross, and son, Greg and Chris Peter; grandchildren, David and DeAndrea Krien, Tracy and Kari Peter, Dustin Krien, Justin Peter and fiance, Megan Sage, Chad and Annie Peter, Britany Peter, Lauren Gross and Bret Gross; great-grandchildren, Chase Krien, Kensley Krien, Kylie Peter, Tracer Peter and the soon to be born twins of David and DeAndrea Krien, Chanell Peter, Chauntell Peter, Madison Faylor and Taron Faylor. Kids didn't have to be related biologically to be hers and every one of these children could not have been loved more by Grandma Arlene than if they were.

There were too many people who called her friend to list, but she loved all the people in her life. Coming from being an only child and a relatively small family, she married into a huge family that she claimed as her own. That in-What fun they had with that. After cludes in-laws, special nieces and Royce's death in 2001, she bucked nephews, and all those cousin she considered hers also.

Last year, the record was set at 2.5 million students all reading the story "Corduroy" on the same day.

This year, Scott Carmichael, principal, read "The Snowy Day." The program began with the sixth grade students telling the rest of the grade school their favorite book they had read in grade school and a little bit about the story. Lucas Zweygardt was chosen as the student doing the best job with his book, "Harry Potter." Mr. Cassidy took him out for lunch as his reward.
