Department report given by nurse

By Nathan Fiala
nfiala@nwkans.com

The Cheyenne County Hospital Board met on Thursday, April 26 in the basement of the clinic. First on the agenda was a department head report from Susan Roelfs, registered nurse and case manager. She was busy when the meeting started but came in shortly after and told the board of her background and current position as Case Manager. She talked about the learning curve she's had with billing, the swing bed program, patient review and discharge planning and how she's dealt with these issues.

In his administrator's report, Les Lacy said the hospital had met its cash needs for the month but had not been able to deposit money into the funded depreciation account. News about the grants the hospital had applied for should also be known by mid to late May. Repairs are planned for different parts of the hospital due to water damage, and cabinets will also be replaced in the kitchen. Mr. Lacy was able to procure free flooring for one room at a convention, which Scott Schultz will install. The kitchen will be inoperable for two to three weeks when it gets remodeled. An automatic sprinkler will also be installed at the Bird City Clinic. Michelle Sherman has been hired as the housekeeping supervisor.

Jackie John gave her Great Plains Health Alliance report, saying that the Supreme Court's hearing on the Patient Protection and Accountability Act, and their seemingly-divided stance on the issue, has raised a lot of concerns about future regulations and requirements. The ruling is not expected until at least June, so more news will come later.

Great Plains Health Alliance

is having an educational meeting about upcoming regulation changes on May 2-3 in Salina. The meeting will cover discharge planning, pharmacy oversight and Meaningful Use criteria.

Meaningful Use phase two criteria have been published and are being commented on now. Some of the new regulations cannot be provided by vendors to health care providers and will most likely not make it into the final phase two criteria.

The next hospital board meeting will be on Thursday, May 24 at 3 p.m.

Water Needs for Cattle

With summer just around the corner, or in some cases already here - it's good to remind ourselves of beef cattle water requirements and how important it becomes during those hot days.

Water requirements for beef cattle depend on weight, stage of production (such as lactation), and temperature. As weight increases, the amount of water needed also increases. The same holds true for temperature, as temperature increases, so does water intake. Also, if the animal is lactating, water requirements also increase. Here are some considerations for water intake that may be helpful:

1. Daily water intake may vary from 3 to 30 gallons per day depending on age, body size (weight), stage of production and the environment (mainly air temperature).
2. Water consumption will range from 1 gallon per 100 pounds of body weight during cold weather to nearly 2 gallons per 100 pounds of body weight during the hottest weather.

County Extension Agent

3. Lactating cows require nearly twice as much water as dry cows.

4. Clean fresh water free of manure, dirt, and other debris is important.

Contact the Cheyenne County Extension office at 332-3171 or cfear@ksu.edu with questions or comments.
