planned in the band shell at 11 p.m. on Saturday, June 15. The activities will need to be planned so it doesn't interrupt the ceremony.

A committee comprised of Glenn Isernhagen, Shirley Zweygardt, Kary Meyer and Denon Flemming, Kelsie Andrist, Robin Burr and Cara Hunt volunteered to help with fund raising. Casey McCormick volunteered to head up the parade with day and time decided at a later date.

Those working with Glenn Zweygardt on bringing him and his sculptures to town were not present at the meeting so there was no report. Tobe Zweygardt, local metal artist, said he would try to do what he could.

The Cheyenne Center for Creativity had designed a logo and theme for the celebration. The theme, which was approved by those present, is "Bloom where you are planted."

Margaret Poling proposed a softball tournament with possibly having honor classes forming team. It would be just a fun time. Penny Gienger, rec director, said the work at the ball diamond at the fairgrounds would be done in time.

The alumni will continue to plan the golf tournament to be held Saturday morning. A community church service will be held Sunday. There was discussion as to where it should be held - park or the old country church. Lea Keller said the church would hold 100 people and it appeared that the consensus was to hold it at the church.

Kids games were discussed. Kary Meyer had talked to the Theater Committee and suggested that the theater be open for a Saturday matinee and a late night movie. After all the alumni has done in helping renovate the theater, she said, the least the committee can do is open the facility so they can see where their money was used.

Janet Carman said that Josephine Churchill's home would not be available for the 125th.

It was suggested that people having family or business memorabilia might be interested in setting up displays. Lea Keller said that there were lots of displays at the museum. There might be a place where displays could be set up there and that Elton Keller had found some posters which might also be on display at that time.

Donations

Arrangements are being made to establish a tax deductible account where people can donate. Kary said she is working with the county attorney. People can address their checks to "Celebrate St. Francis."

Next meeting

The next meeting will be held at 6 p.m. on Monday, Feb. 25, at the old country church by the museum. People need to note the change of the meeting.

It was a small wedding, Dixie said, and then we went to my mom's house for a reception.

Charles' parents had moved to town for the winter so the newlyweds settled in their house until they moved into their little trailer house. It was little, Charles said, and we lived it in for about a year until they moved onto their place south of St. Francis where they spent the next 40 years.

Through the years, they were farmers, sharing the load of the work together. Dixie, who had grown up in town, and said she loved farming and did her share of driving the tractor and helping with anything needed around the farm.

Dixie said she had never cooked a meal until she was married. One of her first meals was one prepared for eight harvesters.

Charles mother helped me with the cooking, Dixie said. Charles said that she had written everything down from the time to peel potatoes to getting the meal on the table. She told me what time I was supposed to be in to eat, Charles said.

When their family of three daughters, Nancy, Carol and Charlene, were growing up, they learned how to cook as well as work in the field, Dixie said.

They moved to town in 1991. They both agreed that it was hard to leave the farm where they had spent most of their married life.

Their advice to young couples is to talk things over and tell each other that they love each other every day.

The Curryrs have eight grandchildren and six (almost seven) great-grandchildren.
