Area gets snow with .54 moisture

The ground hog saw his shadow on Feb. 2 and that means six more weeks of winter. As of Monday, it looked like it might be a very cold six weeks if the temperatures that day were any indication.

The weather was exceptionally warm on Friday with the temperature reaching 80 degrees. The spring-like days last week were welcome. People took time to work in the yards and wash their cars and windows only to see the weather turn to blowing snow about 10 Sunday evening.

The weathermen had forecast 3 to 5 inches of snow and the wind to blow anywhere from 25 to 35 miles per hour. Richard Grace, at Grace Flying Service, St. Francis, said gusts were measured at 35 to 40 miles per hour during Sunday night and early Monday morning.

Kathy Woodcox, St. Francis weather observer, reported 3 inches of snow with .54-inch precipitation. The wind continued to blow Monday morning but by mid afternoon, the sun came out and the snow began to melt. However, the temperatures never went above 32 degrees.

The Decision Weather forecast for the rest of the work week is cold. Highs are predicted to be in the 20s and low 30s, warming to the 50s over the weekend. The lows should be in the single digits to low teens.

Decision Weather also stated that it may be toward the end of the month before the temperatures warm to what they were on Sunday.

County consolidated law enforcement held up

By Karen Krien

At the Jan. 30 meeting of the Cheyenne County Commissioners, county attorney Kevin Berens reported on several different matters including presenting the commissioners with an updated employee handbook and research he had done on consolidated county law enforcement.

At the present time, a board for consolidated law enforcement would require five members including county attorney, chair person, mayor of the largest city in the county and two elected members. This law does not guarantee representation from Bird City as it is the smaller community in the county.

Attorney Berens said he will contact the Kansas Attorney General regarding Consolidated Law Enforcement Boards and home rule, which would allow the county commissioners to change the law to add the mayor of Bird City and another representative. (It would need to be a seven member board.) He also noted that it will probably be some time before any kind of answer is received. Until more is known, the matter has been tabled.

Sheriff department

The undersheriff had turned in 34 hours overtime and the employee handbook states that overtime will not be paid unless it is considered an emergency or if the department head approves the overtime, it can be paid. Since there is generally a lack of budget in the sheriff's department at the end of the year, there was concern among the commissioners. Commissioner Tim Raile said that he would talk to Sheriff Eddie Dankenbring and challenge the overtime.... "was the overtime earned in an emergency situation?" and ask him to keep a log of hours worked which will be submitted with the hours. The commissioners said they want to see all overtime claims in any of the departments and they will make the final decision..

Budget policy

Attorney Berens presented a county budget policy. The policy prohibits each department in which funding comes from the General Budget from overspending on a line item. A department cannot overspend a line item unless permission is granted from the commissioners. The commissioners also stated when a department's budget gets critically low before the end of the year, they will be reviewing all spending. Attorney Berens had said earlier that if a department is over budget, the commissioners can

Village approved to build housing

Paul Rainbolt, administrator of the St. Francis Good Samaritan Village, received final approval for the construction of a new four-plex on the Village campus.

"This project has been on the books for several years," said Administrator Rainbolt. "We are excited about the opportunity it brings to the Village to continue to provide independent living apartments for our area residents."

These apartments will be single bedroom, bath/shower, kitchenette with dishwasher, range and microwave oven. The apartment will also have a washer and dryer and independent heating and air conditioning.

The facility will be built directly east of the present activity room in the area of the fenced yard. Off-street parking will be provided on the south entrance to the apartments with two car spaces for each apartment.

"As our area residents age, we feel there is a continuing need for independent living as testified by the eight to 10 requests that are on the waiting list," Administrator Rainbolt said.

Penn Building Services will be the general contractor on this project with most of the materials coming from local businesses.

"We expect to get started as soon as conditions allow for the cement to be poured," the administrator concluded.

Corporation buys land in Campus for ethanol plant

The board of managers of Western Plains Energy, L.L.C. of Quinter recently announced that it is exercising its option on the property where they intend to construct a 30-million gallon ethanol plant. The plant site is located in Campus, which is 5 miles east of Oakley.

The Western Plains Energy Board is also pleased to announce that it has received subscriptions for over $10 million in its initial public offering. A second round of investor meetings was recently completed in several locations in Kansas, Colorado and South Dakota.

"We were very pleased with our recent meetings, which resulted in many new subscribers, including a substantial group of South Dakota residents," said Jeff Torluemke, chief executive officer of Western Plains Energy. The $41.1 million project requires a minimum of $15.7 million in equity financing.

At a recent board meeting, the Western Plains Energy Board extended the offering period of its initial public offering drive until March 1.

"We expect that we will reach the offering's minimum of $15.7 million in the next few weeks, close the offering, and, if these bankers this year are: Grace Zweygardt who will receive the Windbreak Award; and George and Deb Ballinger, who will receive the Kansas Bankers' Soil Conservation Award.

A coloring contest has been held in grades kindergarten through second. These children will be judges on their ability to color a certain picture. However, the contest in the third through sixth grade students will be a little more difficult as each student will be asked to draw a picture about recycling and/or anti-littering.

Prairie dog legislation causes concern in county

At the Jan. 30 Cheyenne County Commissioners' meeting, Dan Schlittenhardt, county noxious weed department supervisor, reported on new legislation concerning prairie dog eradication which is being considered this session. The hearing was held Jan. 29 but, as of Tuesday, no further information was known.

House Bill 2027 which deals with the management of prairie dogs has a number of proposed changes but for the most part, it appeared to have only minor changes including allowing the county commissioners to authorize the purchase of materials and hire a person to control the prairie dogs. However, in the next section of the bill it states, "Prairie dogs are a species of management concern requiring both control and protection."

Prairie dogs are close to being classified as an "endangered species." But they are a pest to farmers in northwest Kansas who are finding them taking over the pastures and eating the sparse grass which has managed to grow despite the drought leaving the land bare and subject to erosion. Neighboring landowners don't want them on their land either but, according to Supervisor Schlittenhardt, prairie dogs are looking for better pastures and branching out, even moving into stubble fields.

Senator Stan Clark in a statement made Monday said, "Why in the world would all the major statewide farming, livestock and county government organizations want to manage prairie dogs instead of eradicate them?"

He said that he didn't understand why would they testify in support of a document whose goal is to have within 10 years, 20,000 more acres of prairie dogs in western Kansas.

"Why in a time of great national concern about bio-terrorism would

House Bill scares people and senator

Late Tuesday afternoon, Elton Keller, Cheyenne County farmer and rancher, alerted the Herald staff to the fact that there were some information in House Bill 2027 which could place state farmers and ranchers in the same situation that Wyoming farmers and ranchers are in and that is losing all control when it comes to getting rid of prairie dogs.

Senator Stan Clark, Oakley, reported that only he and Paula Keller, St. Francis, had opposed the bill which is now being debated.

Senator Clark was distressed that a number of impressive organizations were supporting the bill and wondered if members really knew what was contained in the bill.

Those proponents were: Kansas Department of Wildlife and Parks (Mike Hayden); Audubon of Kansas (Ron Klataske); Stephen Aberle, farmer from Washington County; Kansas Livestock Association (Mike Beam); Kansas Farm Bureau (Steve Swaffer); Kansas Association of Counties (Judy Moler); Kansas Legislative Policy Group. (John Pinegar for Fred Flax).

The senator is concerned that if this bill passes there could be an additional 20,000 acres of prairie dogs towns in Kansas.

Contact Senator Moran and Representative John Faber to voice your concern.

we seek to protect a rodent that is a carrier of fleas that can and has carried bubonic plague?" he asked.

The legislation would allow those people wanting to keep prairie dogs to do so as long as they are contained on their land. There is also talk of establishing certain areas for prairie dogs to satisfy environmental groups who are concerned about eradicating them to where they will no longer be around.

"Why do we believe pressure groups (environmental groups) and government officials when they say 'trust us' when the record shows countless examples that they are not trustworthy? Why would anyone in their right mind want the government calculate into the equation its view of "aesthetics" in creating a management plan for the land and habitat the prairie dogs are going to live on? Don't people know that they are just trying to turn our pastures into parks!"

Prairie dogs moving into neighboring pastures are not wanted. Neighbors who find the unwanted prairie dogs turning up in their pastures can complain and the landowner with the prairie dogs will be contacted and urged to get rid of them.

With the proposed law, if the prairie dogs move into the neighbor's pasture, he can go to the county commissioners who will provide a written notice to the landowner with the prairie dog population to provide management. If control measures are

Road and bridge department

Dave Flemming, road and bridge supervisor, presented his monthly budget reports and road work plans for the coming year. He reported that he had purchased a snow plow for $8,000 and was still looking at scrapers.

The supervisor had been approached by the Good Samaritan Village Administrator concerning the use of the county's tractor to clear the road after a snow storm such as the one which occurred in January.

The tractor which would be used belongs to the county but is used by the Graces who run the county airport.

There was discussion about liability and, in the end, the commissioners decided to allow the Graces to clear the road with the tractor, which, would also open the road to the airport. This is especially important in case there is a need for the ambulance crew to meet the medical plane.

Noxious weed department

The commissioners signed the annual Noxious Weed Eradication Department report and talked about new prairie dog legislation.

Supervisor Dan Schlittenhardt asked to attend several meetings and was granted permission.

Commissioner Raile reported that he had heard complaints of gophers eating wiring at the fairgrounds and asked the supervisor to treat the gophers as well as spraying for "goat head" weeds.

The commissioners also discussed trying to get rid of joint grass which is growing in the ditches and on the county's right-of-ways. Commissioner Raile felt that if joint grass is treated aggressively, it would encourage grass to grow. Commissioner Ron Krien thought that with the drought conditions, without joint grass, there would be more erosion.

Supervisor Schlittenhardt was asked to see what kind of weed killer would work the best on joint grass. Also find out how much it cost and when it was best to apply it.

In other business

In other business:

- The commissioners approved signing the secretary of state signature sheet; paying the Western Plains Resource, Conservation and Development dues of $250; signed a contract with ThyssenKrupp Elevator for the elevator inspection; okayed Mary Morrow to attend a register of deeds meeting; Terry Miller, clerk, to attend a Health Information Portability and Accountability Act class and Dolores Jenik to attend a treasurer's school.

- Richard Stephens of S & S Services, had contacted the county about abating his company's 2000 taxes. The county attorney recommended against this action and the county appraiser will be asked to attend the next meeting so more information can be gained.

- Attorney Berens recommended that the commissioners not sign the agreement with Greater Western Kansas Regional Juvenile Center in WaKeeney. Instead, they should contract with Finney County for services. The county clerk will get the contract for the next meeting.

- J.R. Landenberger, St. Francis City Superintendent, asked if the city could use 911 funds for city street signs. The cost for the signs would be around $4,207.60 and the city crew would probably make the signs and use the county sign maker. There was sufficient money in the 911 Fund and, if the county attorney approved that it was legal to spend the funds this way, the commissioners agreed.

Next meeting

The next meeting of the commissioners has been set for 8 a.m. on Feb. 14 in the commissioners' room at the courthouse in St. Francis.
