Tragedy came in to form of fire to Frank Sowers home and property north of Bird City on Tuesday.

Strong winds blowing from the south fueled the fast moving fire that is believed to have started in the old farm house. When the Bird City Fire Department arrived flames had spread to several vehicles and other property outside of the structure.

"Frank said he thought it was electrical," said Fire Chief David Hickert, "He had a switch in the house that hadn't been working right.'

When the fire fighters arrived they were able to move one vehicle out of harms way. However, the house was a total loss and property damage was extensive.

seeing that the county paid for no alcohol (it is against the law for the county to pay for alcohol). They also stressed that they did not think that the technicians would ever drink alcohol if they were on a run and Director Gabel re-enforced that none of the technicians would do that. Director Gabel said that when they spent over the $10, they were required to pay the extra but there was no compensation back to the ambulance department if they did not spent the $10. The commissioners asked if $12 would cover the costs of a meal? Commissioner Ron Krien said that there were more important things to discuss than the cost of meals. The commissioners asked that the director come back to another meeting with a proposal.

Director Gabel thought that emergency medical technicians, especially those living out in the country, should be reimbursed mileage expense, especially since the commissioners were paid mileage. Jane Brubaker, commissioner, said that the commissioners were not paid mileage and none of the courthouse employees were paid mileage to come to work.

He said that some counties pay emergency medical technicians for the time they are on call. The technician cannot make any plans to be out of the area during that time and he felt that these people should be compensated, even if it is only $2 an hour. The commissioners said they had never been asked to compensate the technicians — the director should make a proposal.

Director Gabel pointed out that emergency medical technicians were volunteers and they were not always compensated by their regular job when then were called out. The commissioners countered that, yes, the technicians were volunteers but they were also paid—some may make more on a run than they would have had they stayed at work.

Commissioner Jane Brubaker said they appreciated the technicians and they had been given increases in salaries. The increases would not have been awarded had the technicians not been appreci-

Earlier, the ambulance bookkeeper had been asked to make copies of (each run form) the technicians' run cards when turning in the technicians' (payroll) salaries. She had made some phone calls and was told that, if the run cards are taken out of the office, it is against Health Information Portability and Accountability Act (HIPPA privacy) regulations and, added, that none of the other county clerks are asking for this information. Mrs. Bowers said that if she had to black out names on the run cards to bring the were not important. He was inter-records to the courthouse, she would be required to visit (not call) each of the people (patients) on that list and tell them what she was going to do.

Director Gabel asked why it had to be a record in the courthouse.... that the records are available in the ambulance barn.

Clerk Terry Miller said the county's auditor had requested the run cards saying that it was the only record (actual timecard for EMTs) and that the county had adopted two resolutions making it legal for the courthouse to have the run cards.

Commissioner Tim Raile suggested that they meet with Kevin Berens, county attorney, concerning the regulations.

At the last meeting, the commissioners had discussed the hours worked by the ambulance bookkeeper. They had earlier set her hours at 128 hours a month but she was working over that amount of hours each month. Mrs. Bowers had already said she wanted to be able to work hours when it was more convenient for her. Commissioner Raile suggested that she work on a contract which might solve the problem

Director Gabel said he was not aware of the bookkeeper's set hours until he read it in the paper. The clerk said he had sent him the information when the commissioners had originally set the bookkeeper's hours.

Director Gabel had the figures which showed that the ambulance department made money but when he turned in his budget request for the department each year, his requests are ignored and the department was not allowed to acquire funds. In fact, he no longer had a Capital Outlay Fund so a new ambulance could be bought when it is

Commissioner Raile pointed out that the ambulance, which makes money through runs, is the property of the county, thus that money belongs to the county. Most of the money brought in over the ambulance budget goes toward lowering the taxes. He also said that, while there is no Capital Outlay Fund in the Ambulance Budget, there is $65,000 set aside for a new ambulance and, next year, $30,000 will be Director Gabel also asked that his salary be raised from $450 a month to $1,000 a month. He said that most ambulance directors received considerably more and, while he had another job, he worked nights and weekends to see that the ambulance service is run well.

The commissioners said that the counties who had higher-paid directors also required the director to do the bookkeeping and they were not paid for runs.

Director Gabel said his wages

Director Gabel had said earlier, that the technicians are different than the people who work at the courthouse because they are called out in the middle of the night, work all night and come into work the next day because that is their job — That this makes them different from those people working in the court-

Commissioner Brubaker asked if the emergency medical technicians had been sent to help out Goodland's service? Director Gabel said they had gone on only a couple of runs when Goodland was in a bind. He added that he gives the Bird City technicians the chance to make the run to bring up the city's number of runs and it also gives the young technicians some experience. Commissioner Brubaker said she was not in favor of sending the ambulances on runs for Goodland and she knew that some the Bird City technicians did not want to be called to make these runs.

Mrs. Bowers said that she did not realize that these technicians didn't want to be called. "I just give everybody a chance to say no," she said.

Mrs. Bowers presented the write offs amounting to $5,363. This is the amount Medicare, Medicaid and insurances would not pay and the bookkeeper is instructed to write it off the ambulance's books.

Mary Lou Douthit, St. Francis, asked to have photography entries on Wednesday. The board approved her request, however, judging for the class will still be on Thursday. Mrs. Douthit was concerned about the open class exhibits and was wondering who was in charge of helping these ladies find and set up the tables. There is never anyone around and someone needs to be in charge of helping them find the things they need, whether it is a fair board member or a volunteer. Mrs. Douthit thought this would take about an hour. Another concern of Mrs. Douthit and Tammy Grice were the weeds in front of the building the week before the fair. Mrs. Grice said that the art and crafts were judged the week before fair and that it is rather embarrassing. She wondered what could be done. The board assured them that things will be different next year and the weeds will be taken care of. Mrs. Douthit also wanted to recog-

Miss Douthit said she knew several people who would be interested in participating. The members said there appeared to be a lack of interest in the ranch rodeo in the last few years and that was why they chose to stop having it.

Miss Douthit also expressed her concern about the Derby, saying she felt that the event was smaller because of the limited weldrules. She said she was interested in running in the Derby next year. The members on the board agreed that anytime there is a change of rules, the first year people will wait and see how things go. They expect the number of cars to be up next year.

There was discussion about other possibilities such as motor cross. The board is open to suggestions.
