The small concrete pour is finished

The final small concrete pour of the new emergency building was done Wednesday. This will complete the building pour.

After a week and a half of volunteer help, the rebar, concrete and base components are complete. This is the first big construction step in the project.

After the final pour is complete there will be several weeks of "down time" to give the concrete time to cure.

The structure materials will be in St. Francis the first part of December.

Names and hours of volunteers are being tabulated and should be ready within the week.

The Christian Church group provided meals for the many volunteers during the concrete pours. The Cheyenne County Museum and members of the Historical Society opened the facility as a place to serve meals

The committee would like to recognize all the volunteers who have contributed many hours. They encourage others to contact either the city office 785-332-3142 or St. Francis power plant at 785-332-3031 for volunteering.

The completion date of the building project has been set for March 15, 2008.
