returned from the American Legion Boys' State of Kansas. Brady Dible, Joshua Carroll, and Lee Albers, who will all be seniors at Golden Plains High School, spent June 2 to 8 on the campus of Kansas State University for the event. Over 640 boys from across the state attended the week-long government and leadership program.

During the program, Dible was a member of the city of Hasler, King County, and held the position of city official. Carroll was from the city of Gardner, Kennedy County, and also held a city official position as well. Lee was a member of the Heritage Association for the city of Raymond, Pershing County. Boys' State is a program in which high school juniors learn the value and workings of democracy on a city, county and state level. The program challenges students by allowing them to form a mock government. Delegates to Boys' State run their own elections for positions from City Clerk to Governor. After these elections, the students find out first-hand the difficult of challenging assignments.

In addition to the mock government, many speakers addressed the delegates during the week on issues facing the current leaders of Kansas including American Legion Department of Kansas State Commander, Russ Shughart, Seward County Administrator/Counsel, C. Edward Young, Kansas State Supreme Court Justice, Donald Allegrucci, Kansas State Senators, Derek Schmidt and David Adkins, Kansas Court of Appeals Judge, Joseph Pierron, Kansas State University Associate Vice President of Institutional Advancement, Pat Bosco, and to make contact. ## Perceived isolation may cause depression

Often those who live in rural areas feel 'isolated' because of the perceived lack of activities, cultural events, and the long distances usually required for travel.

But isolation isn't always caused by the geographic location. Rather, it may be due to major life changes, the loss of shared experiences with friends and family, and just being too busy to do the things we enjoy.

Mental IGH Health Plain Sense LAINS

Often contact with school, church or community is lost as children grow up, or as the result of significant life changes. Once contact has been lost with others it becomes more difficult to regain those ties, or to make new ones.

Emotional isolation can result when individuals feel they are all alone, that no one else is feeling the way they do, and that they have no one to talk to who understands.

People experiencing isolation can have a hard time maintaining relationship that would be helpful. They may not have enough time, or are uncomfortable sharing their feelings with someone else.

They feel they should be able to handle everything on their own, and are overwhelmed. Low self-esteem can be a contributing factor, with the person feeling they are not worthy of friendships, and thus making less effort

People who feel isolated may have ifficulty seeing alternatives to feeling feelings

People can help themselves by changing their approach, and making opportunities for interactions with others. Friends and family members can provide physical assistance and emotional support. Because physical and emotional isolation can result in depression, it may be necessary to seek professional help.
