Technical College hosts open house

The annual Northwest Kansas Technical College summer open house has been slated for Sunday, July 14, from 1- 4 p.m. (MDT), on their Goodland campus. The public is invited to attend this open house to tour the carpentry home and the communications programs on campus, finishing their visits with refreshments in the student fitness center.

The 2002 carpentry home build by students is a "smart" home. If you're looking for a new home, come see this home that illustrates what "smart" means in residential construction.

According to Robert Woodrow, Northwest Kansas Technical College Carpentry Instructor, the 1696 sq. foot home boasts three bedrooms including a master suite with full bath and walk-in closets, hand-crafted cabinetry, oak doors and trim, a walk-in bay window in the living room, and simulated hardwood, tile, and carpets to cover the floors.

The "smart" aspect of the home is derived from the Leviton Integrated Networks Home System installed by the communications network technology students at the college in Goodland.

The Leviton integrates and controls home media centers; computers and fax machines; satellite receivers, video security cameras, and multi-line telephone systems.
