Kerr's wife brings gubernatorial campaign to Colby this week

By DARREL PATTILLO

Patty Kerr, wife of Republican gubernatorial candidate Dave Kerr, was in Colby on Tuesday to campaign for her husband.

"I've been in 35 counties during the last four weeks," she said during a visit to the Free Press newsroom.

"I'm trying to stress in western Kansas that my husband is the only candidate for governor with a strong agriculture background and a strong financial background."

These two assets have never been more important for Kansas," she said. Dave Kerr has been a member of the Kansas Senate for 18 years, and is currently the Senate President. He has been the chairman of every major committee in the Senate, including education, commerce, and the budget, she said.

"Dave's main focus," said Mrs. Kerr, "is on education and economic development."

She said he is also very concerned with the de-population of western Kansas. Kerr is being challenged in the Aug. 6 Republican primary by Bob Knight, Wichita mayor, Dan Bloom, former school superintendent at Eudora, and Tim Shallenburger, state treasurer of Baxter Springs.

The Democrats don't have a primary contest for governor, with Kathleen Sebelius, state insurance commissioner, their lone candidate. She will face the Republican primary winner in November.

Latest polls show no clear-cut leader in the Republican field, although Knight has a slim lead over Shallenburger, with Kerr moving up some and Bloom in last place.

Undecideds seemingly hold the key to victory — they are at 20 percent of the probable voters today.

State park to enforce fire ban

Due to the continued drought, a campfire ban is now in place at the Prairie Dog State Park, located outside of Norton. However, he did say that propane grills are still being permitted for cooking purposes. Signs have been posted at the entrance to the park. "Knowing that campfires are a big part of camping, we held off as long as we could before instating the fire ban," Mathes said. The reason for the ban is the potential fire danger, which has increased in recent weeks.
