The Colby community has lost one of its most active, prominent, respected citizens in the death of Donald Dale Phillips, 91, at Lantern Park Manor on Sunday.

Mr. Phillips' involvements throughout his life were legend and covered a variety of interests and concerns. He was a member of the Kansas Bar Association for more than 50 years, and was admitted to practice before the Kansas Supreme Court in 1935 and before the Tenth Circuit Court of Appeals in 1970.

He was appointed United States Magistrate Judge for the District of Kansas in 1969, and retired from the federal judiciary in 1984.

Mr. Phillips ran the Colby and Lyric theaters, opened the Colby drive-in theater in 1950, and owned drive-in theaters in Phillipsburg, McCook, Neb. and Longmont, Colo.

Mr. Phillips took responsibility for the front pages of the Colby Free Press for several years after his father died. He later kept in touch with readers by turning out a popular column, "Mostly Movies." His columns continued in the Free Press up until early 2002.

He was Colby's mayor from 1965-1969. Mr. Phillips, and many others, was instrumental in establishing Colby Community College, and was a member of the advisory board from 1965-1967. He was among a group who persuaded state officials to build I-70 to the south of Colby, and due to his and the efforts of others, the community enjoys hospital facilities.

He was Colby Business Person of the Year in 1986, and named Citizen of the Year in 1989 by the Kiwanis Club. He was a member of the Rotary Club for more than 60 years and established Phillips Park to honor his parents.

Mr. Phillips was born on March 12, 1911 in Goodland. He is survived by his wife of 63 years, Arliss; two sons: Richard Phillips, Kansas City, Kan., and David Phillips, Prairie Village; a daughter, Pamela Phillips, Altman, Texas; a sister, Dorothy Crabb, Colby; and 6 grandchildren and 1 great-grandchild. He was preceded in death by his brother, Kim.

Visitation is Tuesday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. at Harrison Chapel. Memorial services will be held on Wednesday at 2 p.m. at the chapel with Pastor James Mardock presiding. A private family graveside service will be held at Beulah Cemetery in Colby.

Memorial donations may be made to the Thomas County Historical Society or Colby Community College and may be left at any Colby bank or at Harrison Chapel.

The Free Press will complete the active life of one of its best known citizens in Tuesday's edition.

Overland Park attorney elected Dem's chairman

TOPEKA (AP) — Unlike two years ago, election of a Democratic state chairman supported by Kathleen Sebelius went off without incident this year.

Of course, Sebelius is governor, not just the party's expected nominee. And her choice, Overland Park attorney Larry Gates, drew no opposition from union leaders, as Sebelius' candidate did two years ago.

The result was the Democratic State Committee's unanimous vote Saturday for Gates as chairman in 2003-05 and whole lot of harmony among activists who gathered for the party's annual Washington Days convention.

"No bloodletting. No tear gas," said Dan Lykins, a Topeka attorney who was re-elected the party's state treasurer. "Everybody's happy."

Gates, 55, has been active in the party for more than 30 years, involved in raising money for candidates who included Gov. Joan Finney in 1990 and Sebelius last year. He replaces state Rep. Tom Sawyer, of Wichita, who had served as party chairman for four years, after his unsuccessful 1998 campaign against GOP Gov. Bill Graves' re-election.

Traditionally, activists and officials see a governor as the party's leader, and the state committee accepts the candidate backed by the governor for state chairman.

But that's not always the case — as Gates himself found out in 1983. Backed then by Gov. John Carlin, Gates lost to Wichita labor leader Pat Lehman.

Turkey's surprise a bummer for U.S.

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — Turkey's surprise rejection of a U.S. troop deployment is forcing American planners to rethink a strategy that called for attacks from two fronts to hit Saddam Hussein's army so ferociously his forces would have quickly collapsed.

Turkey's parliament rejected the U.S. request on Saturday, leaving the U.S. plan to base 62,000 U.S. soldiers on Iraq's northern border in disarray.

Washington was so sure that it would gain Turkey's support that cargo ships carrying U.S. armor are waiting off the Turkish shore and hundreds of jeeps and trucks have already been unloaded in southern Turkey.

In Germany, the top U.S. military commander in Europe said military officials were considering alternate plans if Turkey remains steadfast in its rejection of a U.S. deployment. "It's very much a wait and see

A top official in Turkey's governing Justice and Development Party, Eyup Fatsa, said Parliament isn't planning to take up the issue in the "foreseeable future." But Foreign Minister Yasar Yakis appeared to leave the door open for a new vote, saying leaders will conduct a "process of evaluation."

Basing troops in Turkey, on Iraq's northern border, is so crucial to U.S. war plans that American negotiators offered some $15 billion in aid to try to win over Turkish approval.

U.S. and Turkish generals agree that a northern front would lead to a shorter and less bloody war, but Turkish public opinion is overwhelmingly against a war. Legislators failed to approve the measure by just three votes, despite lobbying by Secretary of State Colin Powell.

The northern front was also considered vital to maintaining stability in northern Iraq. Turkey has said it will send troops into the Kurdish areas of northern Iraq if there is a war, a move that Iraqi Kurds who have autonomy there have vowed to resist.

With a northern front a war "would be quicker, there would certainly be far fewer casualties ... and far less risk of civil tensions in Iraq," said Anthony Cordesman, an Iraq expert with the Center for Strategic and International Studies in Washington.

The northern plan called for the 4th Infantry "Ironhorse" Division and parts of the 101st Airborne "Screaming Eagles" Division to seize the oil-rich cities of Mosul and Kirkuk and drive toward the south when war started, experts said.

Taking the oil cities would be a sharp blow to Saddam and would also be politically important. Both Kurds and Turks have claims to the cities and each side wants to make sure the other does not gain control.

Meanwhile, the 255 U.S. strike fighters that would be based in Turkey would fly bombing missions in Iraq.

Aircraft including attack helicopters carrying anti-tank missiles and machine guns would fly out of Turkish border areas to strafe Iraqi troops and paralyze transport on Iraqi roads, experts said.

"The idea is to seize as much territory as possible," said Toby Dodge, a Middle East specialist at Warwick University in England. "All of this is designed to ... break the command and control of the army and lead to a coup."

After seizing the oil cities, the northern troops would be poised to start moving south toward Saddam's hometown of Tikrit and later Baghdad, experts said.

A call she won't forget

TOPEKA (AP) — Gov. Kathleen Sebelius endured repeated but good-natured ribbing Saturday about her recent cell phone no-no call.

Last week, Sebelius attended an event at the White House with other governors, where her cell phone rang during a speech by President Bush, who was annoyed. All day Saturday, cell phone jokes abounded at Kansas Democrats' annual Washington Days festivities held over the weekend in Topeka.

During a meeting of the Democratic State Committee, the phone of someone sitting near Sebelius with fellow delegates went off.

The noise prompted her to stand and exclaim in mock frustration, "It isn't me!" to the laughter of party activists.
