Fairview cozy during cold

What a joy to be living here at Fairview on these terribly cold days. Everything we need is right here so what more could we want? A few of the more hardy ones go out on the town but many just enjoy staying in. We have a library with many choice books for those who want to read, an exercise room for activities, visiting with neighbors or just enjoying the quietness in your own apartment makes a good life.

Cathy Bryan from England came last week to spend a few weeks with her mother, Zelma Reed.

Sunday afternoon, Jean Hawkins and Vesta Roth of Rexford came for a visit with Eileen Dible and Lula Thieler. All four are members of the Social Hour Club in Rexford.

Storage method can affect coffee flavor

MANHATTAN — Storing coffee beans or ground coffee in a decorative glass container on a kitchen counter may cause it to become stale and lose flavor, said Karen Blakeslee, Kansas State University Research and Extension food scientist.

"Storing coffee in the refrigerator or freezer isn't usually recommended, either. Moisture will cause the beans to deteriorate," said Blakeslee, who, as coordinator of K-State's Rapid Response Center, spends her working hours answering food and food safety questions.

Coffee flavor begins to diminish after roasting, she said. It deteriorates rates each time the beans are exposed to air. So, Blakeslee recommended that those interested in a fresher coffee flavor consider these steps:

We had some beautiful spring-like days last week! I'll take "spring" any time of year!

- Buy coffee beans and grind them at home.

- Store in an airtight glass or ceramic container in a dark, cool place. A kitchen cabinet close to the oven can be too warm. The same is true for a cabinet located on an outside wall, warmed by summer sun.

- Buy only the quantity of coffee you can use in a week or two. After opening, the coffee should be used in two weeks.

When unopened, a can of coffee can be stored in a cool, dry place for up to two years.

For those taking advantage of a sale or storing gift coffees, the National Coffee Association suggests wrapping small portions of coffee in airtight bags and freezing them for up to one month.
