

Volume 116, Number 98 Serving Thomas County since 1888

Van offers rides to everyone

Colby Free Press Need a ride? The county can hook you up.

Through a grant from the state and federal government, residents in Colby can get a ride to the doctor's office or around town when they need it.

Barb Hopper, assistant deputy county clerk, said the service started in 1991 when the county got its first van.

"That was the year the program was initiated," she said.

The county got the current van in 1999, which is driven by Ed

The van seats 12 people and runs from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday.

It services the city of Colby and also can be used for special events by appointment only and with an approved driver.

Hopper said a driver must be approved by County Clerk Shelly Harms or the county commissioners. It's been used during the annual Rod Run to shuttle people and she said another example is the Pickin' on the Plains bluegrass festival.

She said they ask for $1 a trip, which isn't a requirement but they do appreciate the donations.

"It doesn't have to be the elderly or handicapped," Hopper

The van is dispatched and scheduled through the Senior Progress Center with director Donna Schielke making the radio calls over the van's two-way ra-

a new outlet for their creativity this

Youth Program are keeping kids busy and giving them something to What started out as an eight-week pilot program with eight classes last year has experienced an explosion

Each class was offered three

Last summer, there were an aver-

That's gone up to 20-27 kids per in growth in its first full year of ex-days a week for one hour each.

age of 12 kids per class.

do, said director Clara Berry.

Classes through the Summer

Colby Free Press

TISHA COX/Colby Free Press

Ed Dean, driver of the public transit van owned by the county, got ready to go make a run this morning.

taxi service. It's available to people monthly report for the state. who need a ride to appointments or to get around town.

The service stays busy, Hopper eral grant.

said. Hopper is in charge of the service and goes to the quarterly Kansas Department of Transportation the monthly reports to keep the ule a ride, call 460-2901.

Children in Thomas County have through July. Classes are from 1-5 professional grant writer, wrote

p.m. four days a week at Colby

a program sponsor and where the classes are held.

county.

United Methodist Church, which is Offering such as chess, photography, Spanish, rocketry, cooking with Oreos and more have filled up with children from around the Sixteen classes are offered this year, with sessions on digital photography and Web page design still to come before the summer is over.

was possible for all to come," Berry

"We bought all the supplies so it

dio. Hopper stressed the van isn't a transit meetings and does the money available for the service.

partment of transportation and fed-It also receives $8,000 in operat-

"He's usually full all day," she ing money from the commission-

Hopper had to write a grant and children showing up," Berry said. entire program is funded through school district has also showed their grants to seven different organiza-

With the success of the summer program, there is talk of expanding to after school this fall and she's also been asked by parents if any classes

ing," she said, adding there has been a definite need of something for children to do in the summer.

"There's been a lot of adults ask-

Berry said she's also talked with

She said the program has gotten

Pioneer Memorial Library director

Jeff Friesen about collaborating on tions to secure funding.

for adults are planned.

some ideas.

Two individuals paid for last help from churches in the commu-

Children's classes drawing lots of interest

Classes started early in June and run grants. She said Deanna Vogler, a

She also has to advertise it in The van operates on a state dethe paper once a week so people know who to call, which is another requirement. They must also meet other state requirements regarding safety and who drives the van.

For information or to sched-

Before the classes started, Berry

Gem, Selden, Brewster, Rexford

and in Colby, the public schools,

said. "It has been really wonderful."

an open house at the church to show off what the children have learned and made, including a display of photographs, custom frames and

For questions, information, par-other projects.

available.

On Sunday, July 31, there will be

"It's just been incredible," she

Sacred Heart Catholic School.

interest and support.

City attorney reviews rules of conduct

By Patty Decker

Free Press Editor The city's attorney reviewed four the council and of the most important aspects of the mayor and, who new League of Municipalities serves at the ing Tuesday night. Attorney Dave Starkey said there are four areas he wanted to talk about dealing with the statutory laws of municipalities, the budget laws, the role of councilmen, city manager and mayor and open meetings act. In his brief synopsis of the handbook, he said that municipalities is a general term to include gov-handbook during the council meet-

The statutory laws, he said, are exactly the same. Starkey said he cannot believe how many times he has heard political candidates say that "if elected, they would straighten things out."

ernment officials whether in the city, county, school, or college.

Under the statutory provisions; however, there are fiduciary duties entrusted to that official or in other words, certain trusts that the elected official must adhere to based on public confidence and within the guidelines of the law.

By following the statutory laws outlined in the handbook, he said, councilmen can take certain risks and know what the consequences are, which is why it is so important for officials to understand what can and cannot be done, Starkey said.

The main points he wanted to discuss on budget laws included that municipalities must have a balanced budget.

passed by the legislature in the there is still another option. 1930s, Kansas was in bad shape," he said "The idea was that once a budget was adopted, municipalities city manager is not doing the job had to live by it until the next fiscal said more than 800 booklets were distributed around the county to

There are ways to amend this, he noted, referring to the cash basis Heartland Christian School and

"Financial affairs of municipalities," Starkey said, "are to be conducted only on a cash basis, encumbered or spent."

Cities cannot borrow, but they have the option of industrial revenue bonds which are generated by utility revenues or general obligation bonds, generated by taxes from

Berry said some classes are still In the event of a disaster, such as the recent power truck breaking down, even no-fund warrants can be issued, but those are some of the certain way. only ways a city can get money to fund items.

Lease-purchase agreements are also acceptable for large items such as fire trucks, huge pieces of equipment, and the like. In these situations, it is the only legal way to borrow and not violate the cash basis ferent roles officials play within a identified as either first, second or third class cities and the category is based on population and each has different forms of government.

"Colby is a second class city," he said and its form of government is mayor, city council and city manager. The mayor, he said, has statutory duties as the executive office of the city and the mayor doesn't vote Colby's Harvest Office ready to help farmers

"The city manager is a professional hired by pleasure of the council," Starkey said.

Part of the duties, but not inclusive, is that the city manager D. Starkey will appoint department heads (sometimes with the concurrence of council, but not mandatory) along with the day-today operation of the city. As a council person, each should know what their function is. "There can be a problem when councilmen as elected officials go to the source of what they see as a concern and try to solve it," he said. Starkey said that as council members, "if there is something you don't like, go to the city manager." It would then be up to the city manager to take care of the problem. One thing Starkey said council members need to keep in mind is that 98 percent of what they do is done around the council table during regular or special meetings so that the public can be included in those discussions. The other percentages are talking to constituents. Council members are not fulfilling their role when they take matters into their own hands. For example, if a council member believes the police are not doing their job and they don't like 'When the budget law was the remedy by the city manager, "Remember, the city manager rves at your pleasure and if the

> you expect, then you can find another city manager.' Regarding the open meetings act, Starkey again reminded the council that when a violation occurs, there is a civil penalty of $500 for > each violation. He added that it is normal for people to visit, but whenever there is a majority of a quorum discussing the business of the city—that's > a violation of the open meetings act. In situations where council members might be aware of a split in a difficult decision, it is also a violation of the open meetings act to call other council members and try to get a block of the council to vote a > Citing another example, Starkey used current council members. "Say Mitch (Beims) decides to talk with Mark (Beringer) about an issue. Then Jim (Brown) calls Mark (Beringer)—that considered three council members and a quorum and it's also a violation," he said.

E-mails can be a violation of the The third issue dealt with the dif-open meeting act as well, in a similar scenario. The idea is to talk at the municipality. In Kansas, cities are council table in order to give all the other council members the knowledge on issues and shared equally.

The only exceptions deemed private or sensitive involve executive sessions (closed door meetings) for non-elected personnel, attorneyclient privilege as some examples. However, when council members leave an executive session, the knowledge about that session needs to remain private and confidential.

class this year. "We had great success with the year's classes and this summer, the nity, volunteers, teachers and the ents can call her at (785) 460-8267. The gift of life

Dianna Middleton of Gove, left, waited while American Red Cross nurse Kay Schrauner, got ready to disconnect her from the pint of blood she donated during a blood drive Tuesday at the Colby Community Building. Jo Cheney, one of the organizers, said 123 units of blood were collected from 140 people who showed up to donate. Of those, nine were first-time donors.

TISHA COX/Colby Free Press

Internet system changing

The Colby Free Press is mak- Tom Betz at 785-899-2338, or ing changes in its Internet system which should make service faster and more reliable.

We are using an upgraded line for inbound and outbound traffic. Dialup Internet customers should not notice any changes or prob-

For those who do, please call To find out, call Betz.

Evan Barnum, 785-462-3963. They can give you a new domain name server, or "DNS," number to enter into your computer's

Using the new number may provide faster downloads, even if your computer is working OK.

Free Press Editor The Harvest Office opened its doors Monday for this year's season, said Roger Hale, manager. Sponsored by the Department of Commerce, Hale said the office is open each day starting at 8 a.m. and will remain open as long as necessary. Located at the Oasis Travel Center on the east side, Hale said he works with farmers, cutters and farmer needs help with his harvest, he should call the harvest office.

Conversely, if cutters and laborers are looking for farmers needing help, they too should call the office at (785) 460-0800.

Hales said today that some wheat producers in Hoxie have already started cutting.

"We have been getting reports of Bucklin, Caldwell, Coldwater, farm laborers. In other words, if a moisture content at 10, 11 and 13 Dodge City, Garden City, Great with test weights over 61, which is very good," Hale said.

This program depends on local public and private sector support to ensure the free service is cost effective to taxpayers, said Joyce Heiman, state coordinator. This year, wheat harvest offices are located not only in Colby, but also Anthony,

Bend, Greensburg, Kingman, Kinsley, Lyons, Oberlin, Pratt, Tribune, and Wellington. Commerce Workforce Center staff will also operate offices in Hays and Liberal.

Kansas leads the nation in wheat production and wheat flour milled. Last year 314,500,000 bushels of wheat were harvested.