Red Sox take beating from Royals

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Curt Schilling could find only one serious negative about his first start in four months — the final score.

The veteran right-hander, who had been in Boston's bullpen most of the season, got cuffed around in his first start since April and the Kansas City Royals beat the Red Sox 7-4 on Thursday night, their fourth win in five games since a franchise-record 19-game losing streak.

"I didn't feel like I had super stuff and I didn't feel like I had bad stuff," Schilling said. "I felt normal."

Schilling (5-6) went five innings, giving up six runs and nine hits. Making his first start since losing to Tampa Bay on April 23, he walked one and had five strikeouts, including the last two batters he faced.

"In the fifth inning I thought I got more comfortable," he said. "I didn't throw my first split until the ninth hitter of the game, which is not something that happens to me a lot. I only think I threw three in the first four innings. A lot of that was confidence. I didn't feel real comfortable with it."

The six-time All-Star, who led the majors last year with 21 wins and then led the Red Sox to the World Series title, went on the disabled list on April 29 with a right ankle bruise after going 1-2 in three starts. He missed 69 games, then was 4-3 with nine saves in 11 opportunities while filling in for injured closer Keith Foulke. It was his first regular bullpen work since 1992.

He got the save in all three of the Red Sox' victories over the Royals in Boston on Aug. 2-4.

"We got some hits off him early," said Emil Brown, who had three hits, including a 422-foot solo homer off Jonathan Papelbon in the eighth. "I wouldn't say he was a hittable pitcher. He didn't look ordinary."

While going 4-6 on their 10-game road trip, the first-place Red Sox saw their lead over the New York Yankees in the AL East shrink from 4 1/2 games to 2 1/2.

Schilling began the season on the 15-day disabled list recovering
