Wood stoves becoming a popular alternative to gas

PAXICO(AP) - There's no heatike wood heat.

Talk to people who have woodburning stoves and that's what you'll hear time and again.

Beatty of Paxico. "It warms your bones.' Beatty has a restored freestand-

Area stove retailers say demand for wood stoves is outpacing supply this winter. It's tempting to install a wood stove so you can dial down the thermostat and the gas bill. But before you channel your inner Daniel Boone, you need to consider the potential drawbacks of roundthe-clock wood burning:

-You save a lot of money only if you have access to free wood. If you have to pay for cordwood or pellets for pellet stoves, you won't save much.

-It takes work. Logs or bags of pellets have to be stacked, stored and carried. The fire needs to be monitored and stoked to keep it going.

-It's messy. Dirt and bark drop off logs onto the floor, and you have to empty and dispose of ashes.

-The heat cannot be regulated as evenly as forced-air central heating. Rooms far from the stove will be chilly.

But if you don't mind the extra work, using a wood stove has advantages as well:

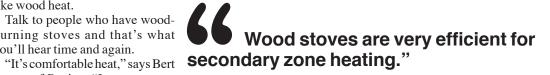

—Some people like the fact that bedrooms stay cooler.

-A wood stove is a focal point in a room. Watching flames is relaxıng

-Wood stoves come in many styles, from sleek steel to brightly colored enameled cast iron.

Of course, wood burning doesn't have to be an all-or-nothing proposition. You can keep a fire running only on weekends or during extremely cold periods and rely on gas during the week.

Chimney sweep Jeremy Biswell, owner of Flues Brothers in Overland Park, says a wood stove is always a better choice for heating than an open hearth, even for occasional use.

"Typically in an open fireplace, you're losing 90 percent of the heat up the flue," Biswell said. That translates to 10 percent efficiency. By comparison, he said, older wood stoves are 50 percent to 60 percent efficient, and new ones are 71 percent to 78 percent efficient. "With a wood stove, you're getting more of that heat back into the house."

The first step in buying a stove, est ones start at $750. Padgitt says, is to have the area where you wish to install it inspected. A certified chimney sweep or stove installer can check for fireboxes recast at a foundry. "You can turn down the thermostat make sure no other appliances are connected to the same flue and can check the liner system.

For freestanding stoves to be vented through the ceiling, the installer can determine where to run the flue and what parts are required.

Because a wood stove is a major investment, you should buy the best quality you can afford.

"There's a huge difference in the quality of stoves," Padgitt said. "It has to do with thickness and weight of steel. That's where it's worth it to pay more, because a heavier stove will last forever."

rie grass and now an Indian reservation, dramatically changing the nation's landscape and spinning a debate about where they belong.

Wind power grew rapidly in 2005, becoming more competitive as natural gas prices jumped and crude oil prices reached record highs. Improved technology, a federal tax credit and pressure on utilities to use clean energy sources helped fuel the growth from coast to coast.

December dedicated the nation's first coastal wind farm. And last week, Fairfield-based General Electric Co. announced a startup near San Diego of the largest wind power farm on Indian land.

Wind power still makes up less than 1 percent of the nation's electricity, but experts expect wind to generate at least 5 percent by 2020.

"The wind resource in the United States is comparable to the oil resource in Saudi Arabia," said Tom Gray, deputy executive director of the American Wind Energy Association, an industry trade group. "It's a major strategic national resource we should be making every effort to develop.'

While windmills may evoke quaint images of yesteryear, they're sparking growing debate, particularly as the first offshore projects are proposed in popular tourist areas, such as Cape Cod, Long Island,

Wind projects have sparked complaints around the country that the windmills cause noise, obstruct scenic views and kill wildlife, including thousands of federally protected birds in California.
