How legitimate is e-mail lottery?

Dear Attorney General Kline: In the past I have received both letters and e-mails informing me that I had won some foreign lottery or sweepstakes. But in the past week I received a similar e-mail message from a group claiming to be a U. S. government agency. Is this a scam as well?

Dear Kansas Consumer: For several years now solicitations by e-mail and mail from Nigeria and other countries have been received here in Kansas and across the country as well. My Consumer Protection Division has been working hard to educate Kansas consumers about these scams.

These solicitations may come in several different forms and may vary as to the exact wording, but they generally ask you for your personal bank account information to allow them to transfer the money you've "won" or are otherwise entitled to into your account. The reality is, they just want a fee up front and will proceed to withdraw money from your account, if you give them your account number.

More and more consumers are becoming aware of these scams, so the con artists are changing their tactics to include the guise of pretending to represent official U. S. government agencies. This latest twist to the scam uses a variety of official-sounding names or legitimate agencies - like the FBI - in an attempt to entice consumers to divulge their account numbers. Whatever agency names are used, the scam remains the same: consumers are informed they have won a significant amount of money and all they need to do to get this cash is to send some money up-front to pay "taxes and fees."

Here are some important tips to remember:

- You do not have to pay for something you have won (taxes, handling charges, or custom clearance fees, for example). If they really had millions of dollars to transfer to you, why would they need YOUR money for fees in advance?
- Do not give your bank account number or credit card number to a caller you do not know. They generally ask for the routing number from your checks * if given these numbers, this person will have access to your checking account.
- Beware of callers requesting money to be sent via wire service or overnight courier. This is a quick, easy and anonymous way for scam artists to "take the money and run" as well as to avoid mail fraud.
- The only legal lottery a consumer may participate in, within the State of Kansas, is the state-run

Kansas Lottery.

If you have lost money or have been contacted by telephone or mail regarding this scheme, you may file a complaint with the U. S. Secret Service, Financial Crimes Division, 1800 G Street NW, Room 942, Washington, D. C., 20223.

If you do receive a letter or e-mail solicitation like the one's already described here, you should destroy or delete it and then warn your friends and family members, too.

Editor's note: For information or to file a complaint, write to Attorney General Phill Kline, Consumer Protection Division, 120 SW 10th Ave., Topeka, Kan. 66612, or call the toll-free Consumer Hotline, 1-800-432-2310.
