Heartland Christian School's Zane Winger, left, and Nick Larmer blood typed a blood substitute called Neo/blood which has blood-like responses without the bio-hazards of real blood. This was part of a crime scene simulation which students were narrowing down a list of suspects involved in a burglary where blood stained scraps of clothing were found next to broken glass. The young forensic scientists had to type the blood sample collected at the crime scene and compare it the blood types of the three apprehended suspects. Karen Larmer's fifth and sixth-grade science class lesson was titled CSI: Colby.

Authorities research deaths of Kansas inmates

WICHITA (AP) — Forty-six inmates have died in Kansas jails and prisons since a state law went into effect in July 2004 requiring the Kansas Bureau of Investigation to look into all in-custody deaths. Twenty-eight of those deaths were from natural causes, half of which were either heart problems or cancer. Another 14 of the deaths were ruled suicides, KBI statistics show. There have been no inmate homicides since the 2004 law went into effect requiring the KBI to monitor all inmate deaths. The most recent Kansas prison homicide was in August 2000. The law came about partly through the urging of Topeka human rights activist Sonny Scroggins, who was concerned about deaths that were occurring at the Shawnee County jail. "It seemed like we were having a death every other month," he said. Scroggins said he had considered asking that grand juries be seated to investigate inmate deaths, but said he is satisfied that the KBI is keeping tabs. "It's been a continuing problem, where people in government custody have come up dead — not just in the state of Kansas, but across the nation," he said. "On the other hand, I'm pleased that we have a system in place with checks and balances. It adds some credibility." Still, Scroggins said he's concerned that many of those who died of natural causes might have been saved if they would have had better access to medical services. Of the 28 natural deaths investigated in the last 18 months, 24 in-involved inmates who were 56 or younger, KBI records show. Among the 14 suicides, 12 were in county jails and two were in prisons. Most of those deaths were caused by hanging. In Sedgwick County, there were 26 suicide attempts at the county jail last year. Sheriff's Maj. Robert Hinshaw, who oversees the jail, said 14 video cameras have been installed at the facility since three people killed themselves there in 2004. He said the Sedgwick County jail was built in way that makes it tough to commit suicide, but that doesn't help in every case. "The construction is designed to make it as difficult as possible, but if someone is determined to kill himself, he can usually find a way," Hinshaw said.

K-State alumna go from Little Apple to Big Apple

HUTCHINSON (AP) — Carmen Neufeld Zolman, of Lyons, always knew what she wanted to do. She depended on the local thrift shop for the outfits she wore in high school, but that was preparing for when she would be a fashion designer in New York City. MelEesa Loret, of Scott City and Jetmore, was an athlete all the way into college, and she never would have guessed she would make it good in New York City in the fashion industry. Now, both small-town Kansas women have jobs they love, on Madison Avenue, as designers for Ralph Lauren on the RLX sportswear team. Sherry Haar, Kansas State University apparel and textiles professor, credits the duo's maturity and work ethic for their Manhattan success. "The one thing about Carmen is that she was organized. That's odd for a design student," Haar said. "I was her adviser, and she was easy to work with. She always came with a plan, and she's also very creative. "I'm proud of her, and I always look her up every time I go to New York," she said. As for Loret, Haar called her "the best illustrator" she's ever taught.

"Her strength is her creativity and her beautiful ability to execute it," Haar said. "She also has a dynamic, vivacious personality. People adopt her." Zolman, a 2002 Kansas State grad, took her first job in New York as a designer with an eyeglass company and tailored her portfolio for the job opening she had spotted in RLX. Her story includes an internship with Land's End. The team she works on is "hard at work" on the spring 2007 line of technical performance apparel, including skiwear, for running and tennis. What she's doing is functional "for somebody who's sweating." "Other divisions are more glamorous," she said, "especially the runway collection." A 4-H girl since age 7, when she dressed her dolls through art classes and home economics, she created outfits and studied fashion books. At 26, she's one of the youngest in her RLX crew. Loret grew up under the assumption that only nerds did art. She played volleyball and ran track for two years at Sterling College. With her skill and athleticism, Loret thought she would be a professional athlete.

After a boyfriend gave her a sketchbook for Christmas, though, that all changed. "It became an obsession," she said. "I like to illustrate. That's my thing." She was two years behind Zolman at Kansas State. They didn't know each other but were in a class or two together. Just as a graduate of Kansas State had helped her, Zolman assisted Loret in getting her job. Both women said they love New York City because of its diversity and the excitement and energy they feel, even though they're surrounded by millions of people. "You can't walk anywhere without bumping into someone," Zolman said. "But it's viewing life from a world, rather than a U.S., perspective." In Lyons, it was crickets she heard, while in New York it's sirens and traffic. "The food is amazing," Loret said. "It's incredible what you can get here." She lives in Brooklyn and has a one-hour commute on a packed subway. "When you walk around in Kansas, you smile," she said. "Here, you look down and go on."
