Sondra Barnett organized a snowman contest on Tuesday since school was closed due to the weather conditions. There could be three members to a team and any creation could be made as long as they supplied the necessary accessories. The children had the afternoon to create and the judging would be that evening. When the builders were finished Sondra served hot chocolate and cookies to warm them up.

The first place winners built two snowmen: Ethan Walter, son of Tina and Gary Delzeit, and Cole Christensen, son of Parker Christensen and Penny and Matt Vogler. The second place prize was awarded to Brooke Wark, daughter of Brandi and Ryan Wark; and Jordan Christensen, daughter of Parker Christensen and Penny and Matt Vogler. They built a space alien snowman. The consolation prizes went to Braden Korte, son of Tony and Kayla Korte, who created a duck snowman and Tristan and Trey Schwarz, sons of Todd and Tonya Schwarz, who built a baby T-Rex.

Mike Johnson and Bill Scott spent most of the day on Tuesday cleaning the city streets of snow. Thank you Mike and Bill for a job well done.
