Mayor wants football at Wichita State; school president skeptical

WICHITA (AP) — Mayor Carlos Mayans has a plan to bring football back to Wichita State University but the university's leader said he's not ready to join the effort yet.

After a 90-minute meeting with Mayans on the subject Friday, Wichita State President Don Beggs said he'd consider the idea, but he is not enthused about using public money for the risky proposal.

"I'm personally very uncomfortable with using taxpayer money for a new athletic program," Beggs said.

A 1997 consultant's report estimated it would cost the university $11 million over five years to run a football program and three new women's sports. No updated cost estimates were available.

Mayans presented Beggs with a seven-page summary detailing how the university could revive its football program, which ended after the 1986 season because of declining interest and a growing athletic department debt. School officials said the program lost $839,000 that season, when it averaged less than 10,000 fans per game.

Revising football has been a recurring subject at the school since then, with both sides citing conflicting evidence about whether having a football program helps a university.

Colby splits with McCook

Colby's American Legion team split a doubleheader with McCook, Neb., Wednesday in Colby.

Colby won game one 8-3. Matt Augustine led the team at the plate and on the mound. Augustine had a team-high three hits and scored a run. Kevin Lang, Jesse Hawk and Eric Blanton each had two hits. Joseph Heier had two RBIs.

Augustine pitched the entire

A 2003 NCAA study found that successful athletic programs can increase enrollment, but other studies found that sports programs don't necessarily draw more students.

"Just starting a football program likely isn't going to be enough to make a considerable difference in admissions," said Chad McEvoy, an assistant professor of sports management at Illinois State University, who has spent more than five years studying the relationship between sports and enrollment.

"Not only are they going to need the team, they're going to need a successful team to see any tangible effect," he said, adding that it might be a better investment to spend tax dollars on academic scholarships.

The mayor says reviving the football program could boost the university's enrollment, diversify the student population and give the community a team to follow.

He said the university has lost nearly 3,000 students since 1987, costing the city an estimated $144 million. Mayans noted that Kansas State, which built its football program into a national power in the 1990s, has gained nearly 7,000 students at the same time Wichita State was losing students.

But university officials say the city's economic fluctuations, rather than the lack of football, caused most of the declining enrollment.

To support his plan, the mayor said Wichita State should set aside some of the $6 million it receives in property tax money for athletic scholarships. He also suggests selling 17,000 tickets in advance at $150 each and convincing athletic boosters to donate $10 million.

To comply with federal law requiring equivalent scholarship opportunities for female athletes, Mayans said, the university should also start a women's soccer team.

George Fahnestock, a Shocker booster who was part of a 1997 task force that studied football's return, said the university should be sure that a new football program does not drain other sports or put the athletic department in jeopardy.

"It's pretty simple: If there's funding I think it makes some sense," he said

City Council members Bob Martz and Carl Brewer said reviving the football program is up to Wichita State, not the City Council. And Mayans said he knows who will make the final call.

"At the end of the day, if the president doesn't want to do it, it isn't going to happen because it's his university and we do not have the right to tell him what to do there," he said.

Coaches propose 128-team field

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Coaches will urge the NCAA to expand its most lucrative championship event during meetings in Orlando, Fla., this week.

Jim Haney, executive director of the National Association of Basketball Coaches, proposed the 128-team field, than 65, in part because postseason bids may help coaches keep their jobs.

Oregon State to play N.C. for title

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Oregon State wanted to come out and make a statement against North Carolina.

Falling behind by five runs early wasn't exactly what the Beavers had in mind.

"I'd say we were pretty frustrated," shortstop Darwin Barney said. "We planned on coming out with a vengeance."

It just took a few innings.

The Beavers stormed back with a seven-run fourth inning, capped by Bill Rowe's three-run homer, and Oregon State forced a deciding game in the championship round of the College World Series with an 11-7 comeback victory Sunday night.

"You saw a bunch of young men with heart, guts and determination take the field here at Rosenblatt, and hopefully, that's one for the memories," coach Pat Casey said.

Oregon State (49-16) and North Carolina (54-14) will play tonight, with the winner taking home its first national title in baseball.

"We're good to get this first win, but we've got a lot of business to take care of, so there's no party tonight," Barney said. "We're playing for a national championship. There's nothing better. What's better than one game for one champion?"

The Beavers are trying to become the first Pac-10 team to win the College World Series since Southern California in 1998. The Tar Heels hope to become the first Atlantic Coast Conference team to win it since Wake Forest in 1955.

Rowe went 2-for-5 with four RBIs, and closer Kevin Gunderson (3-2) pitched a season-high 5 1-3 relief innings as the Beavers ended the Tar Heels' nine-game winning streak.

"After we got that big lead, everyone kind of calmed down and we were just kind of putting it on cruise control," Tar Heels catcher Tim Federowicz said. "After that, they just came back."

With Oregon State down 5-0 in the fourth, Tyler Graham was hit by a pitch leading off and stole third after John Wallace's single.

"When Tyler stole that bag at third, I think it was just a message that we're not surrendering," Casey said.

Chris Kunda walked to load the bases, and Shea McFeely followed with a two-run double. Matt Danford (7-2) came on in relief of starter Robert Woodard and struck out Scott Santschi for the first out.
