

Grant increases number of audio books at library

Midwest Energy has done it again!

A huge public thank you comes from Pioneer Memorial Library for giving back to the community. Thanks to a grant from the Midwest Energy Community Fund, we now have 25 new audio book titles on our shelves. Included in these new acquisitions is everything from the latest Janet Evanovich "Twelve Sharp" to "The Husband" by Dean Koontz. Below are three other new audio books that you might enjoy.

Audio books were probably created for a number of reasons. One of these, I'm sure, was the desire to get the most out of our time. Why read when it is quicker and easier to listen? Or, why sit idly in a car when you could be catching up on the reading that you can never seem to squeeze in.

Perhaps this mentality begs the question as to whether Attention Deficit Disorder (ADD) is genetic or a byproduct of the fast-paced nature of society. In any case, Dr. Edward Hallowell has now created a resource for how to best organize your life in his audio book "Crazybusy: Overstretched, Overbooked and About to Snap!" Listen to Dr. Hallowell's advice on how to balance the mania of your life.

An audio book can also cut down on the noise coming from the queen of babble sitting next to you. (The prior statement is not directed at anyone) A fitting (or subliminal) book for a situation such as this would be Meg Cabot's latest audio book titled "Queen of Babble."

Lizzie Nichols is the Queen of Babble with an uncanny ability to say the wrong things at the worst moments. Fresh out of college, she is anxious to get to England to visit her recent boyfriend, Andy. Lizzie quickly discovers however, that Andy is not the man she thought he was. With a non-changeable flight ticket, Lizzie has no choice but to stay in Europe for the time being. She decides to visit a friend in France at the Chateau where her friend is employed. It isn't long before Lizzie is twitterpated with Luke, the hunk owner of the Chateau. The problem is Lizzie's mouth keeps causing problems at the Chateau. Will Lizzie find a way to use her mouth as a help more than a hindrance?

If the queen or king of Babble still won't quit maybe she'll pipe down during the reading of "Killer Dreams" by Iris Johansen.

Sophie Dunston, a leading sleep researcher, developed the drug REM-4 as a cure for insomnia. Unfortunately this drug is taken one step further by her former boss Robert Sanborne; a malevolent man looking to manipulate REM-4 for the purposes of mind control.

His worst intentions have already taken a heavy toll in Sophie's world. Her once innocent father - turned victim - killed his wife and nearly killed Sophie and her son. Worse yet, Robert Sanborne seems capable of escaping her every maneuver to expose him. A compromise with a former REM-4 victim named Matt Royd appears to be her only chance to rid the world of Robert Sanborne. Someone has to go, will it be him or Royd? (pun intended)
