The Kansas Bowling Proprietors' Association (KSBPA) announced the selection of Colby's Charles Schwanke into the KSBPA Hall of Fame.

Formal induction ceremonies were held July 30 at the group's annual meeting in Kansas City, Mo. Schwanke is co-owner and operator of the Colby Bowl and Fun Center. He began his tenure at the Colby Bowl in 1974 with his parents Orville and Louise Schwanke. He was later joined by his younger brother Vernon Schwanke.

Lanes and the Colby Bowl for several years.

In 1982 Orville was one of the first members inducted into the KSBPA Hall of Fame. He served as the group's sergeant-at-arms for many years and was supportive of the organization's mission. Orville and Charles are the first father-son members of the Hall of Fame.

Charles, a 1968 graduate of Scott Community High School, helped with the family businesses including the skating rink, bowling lanes and swimming pool. He graduated from Fort Hays State University in 1972 with a degree in business administration.

Charles has served as the KSBPA sergeant-at-arms, treasurer, vice-president and was elected president of the group in 1987. He was also the chair of the membership committee and was a member of the Kansas Bowling Council and Special Awards Committee.

Charles is also active in community organizations. He recently completed a term as president of the Colby Chamber of Commerce and served four terms on the Colby City Council. He is currently completing his fourth term as chair of the City of Colby Planning Commission.

Charles and his wife of 34 years, Debbie, have two adult sons. Michael and his wife Tenille live in Park City. Michael is a news anchor for KWCH-TV. Tenille teaches biology at Prairie Heights High School. Justin also lives in Park City. He is an information systems analyst for Cargill.

Prince, Wildcats ready to work

MANHATTAN (AP) — There is constant bustle at Kansas State. Scaffolding surrounds the Vanier Football Complex as workers quickly hurry to finish a massive renovation of the football program's headquarters. Trucks and construction material are scattered everywhere.

It's a telling scene for new coach Ron Prince, who eight months to the day after he was hired as the successor to Bill Snyder is on the eve of his first fall practice.

After two straight losing seasons and with a new coaching staff in place, there's plenty of work to be done.

"Tomorrow will be a really big day for us," he said Friday. "I'm really looking to see what each of these players can do."

Prince, 36, said the opening of fall practice represents the next step in a meticulous schedule he set forth upon his arrival in December.

Winter workouts gave way to spring football, and grueling summer sessions have prepared players for physical tests Saturday morning. The premise, Prince said, is simple: If you don't pass, you don't play.

And like the schedule, Prince isn't coy about what he expects to see from practice.

"I want the practice to be fast," he said. "I want the practice to be demanding of the players. And I want to really stretch the player to see what he's retained and how quickly he's learned. That's what I'm looking for in practice."

Linebacker Maurice Mack, one of a handful of seniors who remember when Kansas State was among the nation's elite, said he has butterflies for the first time in ages. The nerves have come back, prompted by the unknown.

"It's a whole new start," he said, cracking and popping his knuckles. "Everybody's on edge right now. Everybody's nervous. But I think everybody's ready to get it going."

That includes senior quarterback Dylan Meier, who sat out all of last season while rehabbing a shoulder injury. He begins a three-man race for the starting job in Kansas State's season-opener on Sept. 2 against Illinois State, a race Prince maintains is open.

"It's a time for everyone to get together chemistry-wise," said Meier, who will battle sophomore Allan Evridge and freshman Josh Freeman for the starting nod. "But for any new scheme, new offense, new team, new coach coming in, it weighs that much greater. It's going to be a very, very important time for our offense, for our whole team, to come together."

Kansas State returns 17 starters, the most of any team in the Big 12, but quarterback isn't the only position up for grabs during fall practices.

Running back is already a question mark. Sophomore Parrish Fisher is working his way back from injury, junior college transfer James Johnson is still finishing class work, and Thomas Clayton — the Wildcats' leading rusher a year ago — is suspended for the season opener after an altercation with a parking services employee.

The entire defensive line is in flux, and while most of the offensive line returns, it is still young and unsettled.

"I want to be fair to these young people and give them a legitimate chance to compete," Prince said. "When there's a competitive tension on your team, and everybody knows they have a chance to make the roster, to compete for playing time, I think it makes you a better team."

Offensive coordinator James Franklin said his players aren't alone in not knowing what to expect, though. The entire coaching staff is feeling its way through fall practices.

Franklin and defensive coordinator Raheem Morris were in the NFL last season, and only a handful of others were with Division I programs. Prince was a relatively unknown offensive coordinator at Virginia, and the only holdover from Snyder's staff is defensive coordinator Mo Latimore.

For Franklin, fall practices finally means players have a chance to play — and coaches have a chance to coach.

"From the day we got here, Coach has had us running in a thousand different directions," he said. "But when it comes down to it, we want to be out on the field. We love the practice."
