Eagle team goes 1-1 at home

Colby's volleyball team still needs to learn to keep up the pressure according to coach Lesley Wagoner. Colby split two matches Tuesday in Colby. The Eagles defeated Saint Francis 25-20, 25-16 and lost to Oberlin 25-27, 21-25. "This was just our second date playing so we just need to work hard on being aggressive throughout the play," Wagoner said. "With St. Francis, they picked up a lot of our spikes and dug out of the net well, we had too many unforced errors in all matches—we will work on this." Even though the season is still young, Wagoner still likes the attitude. "I am really proud of the girls. They come to practice each day ready to work hard. We just need to step it up a notch," she said. Individual statistics from Tuesday were not available. Wagoner said she does not have any specific strategy when the team plays two matches in the same day. "There is nothing special for playing twice in one night. They just have to play hard and consistent throughout each match. We may change the defense and offense a little to adjust to each team," she said. Colby is 3-1. Colby plays 3:30 p.m. Sept. 14 at Scott City. Hoxie and Oakley will also be there. In other Colby action Tuesday, the junior varsity team defeated Saint Francis 25-14, 21-25, 25-10. Colby defeated Oberlin 25-15, 25-16. Colby's C team defeated Saint Francis 25-13, 25-16; Oberlin, 25-13, 25-12 and Sharon Springs 25-10, 25-15.

Colby's Courtney Ress places 4th

Colby's Courtney Ress shot a 92 after 18 holes and received a fourth-place medal Tuesday at Goodland. She initially tied for second but scorecards were used to break a three-way tie. Ress shot a 51 on the front nine and then came back with a round of 41 on the back nine to post a 92. "Courtney played very well and finished ahead of two girls that beat her last week. In fact, this week she finished ahead of the girls that got first and second at last weeks tourney," said Colby coach Rick Williams. Jessica Leiker played junior varsity this week and played nine holes. She shot a 62 to earn the eighth place medal. Leiker finished in a four-way tie for sixth, but ended up with the 8th place medal when scorecards were used to break the tie. Goodland, Colby, Oakley, Thomas More Prep, Trego, Syracuse, Scott City, Ulysses and Garden City played. Colby's next varsity meet is the Colby Invitational. It will be at 3 p.m. Sept. 18 at Colby Country Club.

El Dorado to drug test most middle, high school students

EL DORADO (AP) — The El Dorado school district has adopted a new policy allowing it to test most of its middle and high school students for drugs and alcohol, starting this year. The new policy covers any student in seventh grade or higher who participates in extracurricular activities — a category that was expanded to cover everyone from athletes to members of the band and academic clubs to those who park in the school parking lot or who attend a homecoming dance or even a school play. Many districts test students suspected of using drugs, and it's not uncommon for schools to test athletes, however El Dorado's policy, adopted in June, is much more encompassing. Superintendent Tom Biggs said the policy is meant to make students safe, but some parents and students say it invades students' privacy. Students who participate in extracurricular activities and their parents must sign a form allowing the testing. The students are then chosen at random to take the urinalysis drug test. Students will be tested at least once a year, and those who test positive for drugs or alcohol won't be allowed to participate in extracurricular activities for two weeks. They also will face additional testing and must go through a program — paid for by their parents — to determine the extent of their drug or alcohol use. After a second positive test, a student would have to attend a substance abuse program. The district will pay $25 per student per test — for a total of $10,000 to $12,000. The district points to U.S. Supreme Court cases allowing mandatory testing among athletes and random testing of middle and high school students participating in extracurricular activities. "We felt we needed to include as many kids as we possibly could," Biggs said. Martha McCarthy, chancellor's professor and the chair of education leadership and policy studies at Indiana University at Bloomington, said the policy skirts the line of the Supreme Court's rulings. "You can always test kids that are suspicious," said McCarthy, who specializes in educational law. "What is controversial is testing the suspicious-less. It sounds like they are pushing the legal definition." While some districts include driving to school as part of extracurricular activities, El Dorado's inclusion of attendance at dances and school plays makes its policy unusual, she said. "I've not seen that," she said. "But it's not to say that it couldn't be upheld (in court)." Brett Shirk, executive director of the American Civil Liberties Union of Kansas and Western Missouri, said he hadn't heard of a policy that makes drug testing mandatory to attend dances and plays. "It's extreme and it's alienating students," he said. El Dorado High School senior Rebecca King said she won't sign the consent form. "We have nothing to hide," said King, 18, who regularly attends games and dances and is prepared not to attend her senior prom. She also parks half a block from the school. "They are not trying to help us. We're trying to be educated and graduate." Her father, David King, is also unhappy with the new policy. "It's a giant waste of money," he said. But Pam Coley, who has two daughters attending the high school, said she thinks the policy will help a lot of kids stay drug-free. "The ones that have things to hide don't like it," she said. — — — Information from: The Wichita Eagle, <http://www.kansas.com>
