Oakley to help foreign exchange students learn about rural U.S.

Two foreign exchange are testing their impressions about rural America at Oakley High School.

Zita Santiago, 16 of Madrid, Spain, and Margarethe Schlichter, 17 of Bod Oeynhausen, Germany, didn't know what to expect about rural life.

"First when I heard I am going to live one year in Oakley, Kansas, I was a little bit disappointed," Schlichter said. "It's just, of course, it didn't matter where you spend your exchange year, but inside I hoped it will be a bigger city.'

First impressions faded away for Schlichter after being in Oakley for

"After a while I recognized that a smaller city doesn't have just disadvantaged," she said.

Welcomed by her host parents, LaRene and Kathy Wentz, Schlichter said she likes Oakley.

"It's not as small as I thought,"

Schlichter said she has found Oakleyites friendly and the town offers her much in the way of activities she enjoys, going to the movies, meeting new friends and jogging.

Participating in cross country, drill team, church youth group, FCCLA, basketball, track, scholars bowl, FCA and 4-H leaves Schlichter little time.

"It is really good and the Wentz family is also so nice to me and everything is great," she said.

Orange harvest

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — It's getting hard to grow Florida's official state fruit.

Monthslong droughts are broken by nasty hurricane seasons. Diseases that kill and damage citrus trees and fruit continue to spread. Urban sprawl is replacing groves.

Florida is second only to Brazil in global orange juice production and puts out more than 90 percent of all juice consumed in America.

But as the October harvest approaches, some growers are forecasting a gloomy citrus season for the Sunshine State.

The price of future-delivery juice contracts on the New York exchange have reached record highs, and if the worst predictions of a crop shortage come true, the cost to consumers will follow suit.

Orange juice retail prices are already up 8 percent this year over last, and consumers have responded by buying less (a 7 percent dip in gallons sold).

Until hurricane season ends Nov. 30 and the potential for a winter freeze passes next spring, the best prediction anyone can offer about Florida's citrus harvest is an educated guess.

Two well-respected Florida analysts using complicated mathematical formulas and sampling techniques reached two very different conclusions. Citrus Consulting International put the orange harvest at 123 million boxes, which would be the worst since 1988, when a wave of freezes crippled the industry. Louis Dreyfus Citrus put the figure at 160 million boxes. Abox weighs 90 pounds. Both estimates are well short of the 220 million-box average before the hurricanes in 2004 and 2005.
