Book relives the stories of championship teams

About the only thing Steven Michael Farney did not put in his book were the stories from people who said it still hurt to talk about the losses and missed shots some 50 years after the final buzzer.

Farney spoke Monday at Pioneer Memorial Library about his new book “Title Towns! Class BB Boys Basketball Champions of Kansas 1952-1968.” Included in the book is a recap of the championship seasons by Winona in 1962 and Brewster in 1968.

“Some of these people said it was still too painful to talk about,” he said.

His own memories of small high school basketball influenced him to write the book. He lettered for three seasons as a Wilson Dragon. Farney’s senior year in 1973, Wilson lost in overtime to Luray in the regional semifinals.

“To get to state, that’s a little boy’s dream,” Farney said.

Farney researched how other boys’ dreams came true.

For the past two years, Farney, from McPherson, dived into newspapers, high school newspapers, Kansas Sports Hall of Fame and the Kansas High School Activities Association records about those specific seasons.

He was able to find a scorebook from Brewster’s state championship season. Brewster was one of only three schools that he used actual game scorebooks for research. He went beyond those missed free throws and late shots to give the reader the personality of those teams.

“If you like basketball you will like this book. If you don’t like basketball, you will like the stories,” he said.

Some players, not upset over missed opportunities, gave him stories not found in those newspapers.

Of all the games played by those championship teams during those seasons, he could not find any information on just eight games. Stats from Dorrance’s 1956 season were destroyed in the school fire in 1982.

Class BB represented some of Kansas’ smaller high schools. Schools with 60 students or fewer were in Class BB.

“Class B and BB were like step-children,” he said. “Papers did not cover them.” Media outlets were inconsistent creating an all-state BB team, but never missed the other classifications.

“It frustrated me they skipped these guys,” he said.

Changes in school enrollment forced a reclassification of the entire state in 1969. Brewster won the last state title in Class BB.

Farney learned much more than who lettered in those schools across Kansas. In 1952, Brookville played for the first time with glass backboards in the state tournament in Hutchinson.

Montezuma’s Jim Hull put himself in the top 10 scorers of all time in Kansas high school basketball. Hull didn’t know about it until this year.

Quenemo’s gym was so small and uncomfortable, opposing teams did not want to play there and asked Quenemo if another location could be found. It didn’t bother Quenemo playing somewhere else the year they won state in 1960.

Research like that gave Farney an emotional sense of each town, school and its fans without actually being there.

“I lived in Brewster,” he said. His book is not all about the winners either. Farney noticed Selden’s occasional trips to the state tournament from 1952 to 1968.

Small high-school basketball still exists today, but not quite like it was 50 years ago Farney said.

“The small atmosphere is lost,” he said. “It’s still there, but it a way, it’s not.”

Rival teams were just a few miles from each other, not the distance like it is today.

In 1941, there were 674 high schools in Kansas and they all played basketball.

Today there are about 300 high schools in the state.

“You know what happens when a town loses its high school,” he said. “These stories need to be preserved.”

Farney’s book is available at Pioneer Memorial Library.

Kansas City Chiefs hoping to get injured players back Thursday

Whether those two key starters will be back in time for Kansas City’s AFC West showdown with Denver on Thanksgiving still remained anybody’s guess.

“I’m just practicing,” said Waters, the Pro Bowl left guard who has missed the last two starts. “I’m trying to see how things are feeling. We don’t know for sure about Thursday. I feel better. I’m still not 100 percent. We’ve still got a couple of more days.”

Johnson, a linebacker who is the Chiefs’ surest tackler, also has been out two games while resting his ankle.

“I’m just going to take it day by day and see what happens,” he said. “I’m running a little. It’s the agility part, going from side to side.”

The availability of starting right tackle Kevin Sampson also was in doubt Monday as everyone at Arrowhead Stadium put Sunday’s Trent Green-led 17-13 victory over Oakland behind them and started getting ready for the Broncos.

With Sampson, Waters and Johnson out the last two games, the Chiefs (6-4) have gone 1-1. And what about Tony Gonzalez, the Pro Bowl tight end who was out Sunday with a sprained left shoulder?

“Ask the coaches,” Gonzalez said, declining to discuss his situation.

After putting the Chiefs through a light workout, coach Herm Edwards sounded optimistic.

“They got through the walkthrough today. That’s one step,” Edwards said. “We’ll see more tomorrow. I anticipate some of those guys will be back. What their status is right now, I don’t know. I anticipate they’re going to play, but I’ll know more tomorrow on the practice field. I haven’t ruled anybody out now.”

Without Waters, Sampson and Gonzalez, the Chiefs actually were outgained in total yardage by the Raiders, who also had some key players on the sideline and came in with the NFL’s least-productive offense.

“Ultimately, I’m not the person that makes that decision,” Waters said. “So I’m going to see what I can do. Hopefully, it’s good enough. If it’s not, then I’ll just have to wait.”

If he does play against the Broncos (7-3), who are ahead of the Chiefs by one game in the AFC West, he would wear the brace.

“That’s common around the league,” he said. “A lot of offensive linemen play with a brace on. We’ve just been one of those teams that gives players options. It won’t be any different from any other guys having to play with it.”

“When he came in, the game was very different, the tempo, the competition,” Mangino said. “And it took him a while to make a smooth transition into Big 12 football. To his credit, he’s always been a determined young man.”

yards for the seventh time this season and the 11th time in his career, tying NFL Hall of Famer Gale Sayers on the school’s all-time list.

Kansas coach Mark Mangino said Cornish started blossoming midway through last season.
