Museum event on Sunday

Come to the Prairie Museum Sunday, March 25, for Women's History Day. The day honors Lily Plummer. On exhibit are 40 of the many pieces Lily has painted for the last 37 years. Lily lives at Prairie Senior Living Center and will be present for the reception. Lily has two children, Anna Dean Rodenbeck and Larry Chambers, six grandchildren and 10 great grandchildren.

As part of the day, this year's program will explore the role of women on the farm. "Farming is not for women!" That has been the prevailing thought about the role of women in agriculture over the past century. Women have always played very important roles on the farm. Why then are there so few women farmers? Ann Birney is back to explore the reasons why girls become their father's sons. The Kansas Humanities Council provides the program. The KHC is a non-profit organization with 30 years of experience promoting the understanding of the history, traditions and ideas that shape our lives and build community. The Colby AAUW provides support for the Women's History Day.

Each year, March is designated as National Women's History Month to ensure that the history of American women will be recognized and celebrated in schools, workplaces, and communities throughout the country. The knowledge of women's history provides a more expansive vision of what a woman can do. This perspective can encourage girls and women to think larger and bolder and can give boys and men a fuller understanding of the female experience.

Refreshments will follow the 2 p.m. program. The Women's History Month Program is presented by the Prairie Museum of Art and History and is free. For more information call (785) 460-4590.

Flint Hills ranch offers adventures

By Ron Wilson
Kansas State University

"Feel the burn." It's what the exercise leaders say as they put us through a vigorous round of exercises, burning the calories away. But there is someone who "feels the burn" in a different sense. He is an entrepreneur who is helping visitors literally feel the burn of the pasture burning season in the Kansas Flint Hills.

Meet Jan Jantzen, a Flint Hills entrepreneur and prairie naturalist. Jan grew up near Hill City where his family was in the cattle business. His career took him to higher education via the football field. He went to KU on a football scholarship where he played with Gale Sayers and then on to Southern Cal where there was a player named O.J. Simpson.

Jan embarked on a career in college administration. He was an administrator at Emporia State, among other places, and retired from Xavier University in Ohio. He came back to the Emporia area where he bought a local ranch.

After having friends over to the ranch, he realized people would pay for the opportunity to visit such a place. Today, Jan Jantzen's Grandview Ranch is home to Kansas Flint Hills Adventures which offers agritourism experiences in the scenic Flint Hills.

Kansas Flint Hills Adventures offers trail rides, range burning in season, interpretive tours of the prairie wildflowers and tallgrass prairie, and custom designed packages for families, companies, birdwatchers, hikers, painters, star gazers, and more.

Jan's ranch is located between Emporia and Strong City, not far from the town of Saffordville, population 14 people. Now, that's rural. The nearest town is ten miles by road and six miles by horseback.

Part of his tour includes a fantastic scenic view from a hilltop which Jan calls Oh-my-God-this-is-what-I-came-for Hill, because of the reaction that the vista evokes from his visitors. Jan has hosted people from Connecticut to Seattle and more than 10 foreign countries. Wow.

Recently he was hosting two guests from New York. Jan said, "What brings you out this way? Are you just passing through? Visiting family? Here for a conference in Kansas City?" His New York visitors said, "No, we're here to see you and the tallgrass prairie. We've read about the tallgrass prairie but we've never seen it. We read about you on your Web site and now we've come to experience it for ourselves."

So people are traveling halfway across the continent to Kansas to see the tallgrass prairie, yet it's an asset that people here in Kansas tend to take for granted.

Jan says, "I like to teach people about the Flint Hills. The emphasis is on fun and educational experiences which grow out of a deep respect for the land, plants, animals, and the rural traditions and people of the Flint Hills."

In mid-April, an annual Flames in the Flint Hills event is conducted so that visitors can experience this range burning first-hand. Participants are encouraged to bring cameras and rugged all-weather clothes and join in the burn. I thought this was a pretty slick way to get your pasture burned, but Jan says it is a true agritourism attraction.

This event offers several alternatives for great entertainment. Participants can stay at the Prairie Fire Inn and Spa in Strong City, have dinner at the Emma Chase cafe, tour the Tallgrass Prairie National Preserve, enjoy a covered wagon ride and campfire breakfast, watch vintage western movies and cartoons
