Dulcimer performance planned in Oberlin

Western Plains Arts Association will feature Hieberts Dulcimers Etc. at 3 p.m. Central Sunday, April 1 at the Gateway in Oberlin. Admission will be by arts association season pass or at the door. Cost for adults is $6 and $3 for children. The Hieberts are a wife-husband duo from Abilene, who perform a variety of music on different combinations of dulcimer, guitar and autoharp, along with vocal harmo-nies. Their repertoire includes folk, work songs, gospel, ragtime, waltzes, cowboy songs, old-time fiddle, movie themes and popular songs. This program is made possible in part by Kansas Arts Commission, a state agency, and National Endowment for the Arts, a federal agency. The Western Plains ARTs Association is a non-profit organization which receives private, state and federal funding.

Hoxie student awarded K-State research grant

Jenna L. Kennedy, of Hoxie, a senior majoring in microbiology at Kansas State University in Manhattan, was one of 47 students to earn a research award through K-State's Terry C. Johnson Center for Basic Cancer Research. The $100,000 cancer research award program provides $1,000 stipends to students and $1,000 to their faculty mentors for research expenses. Students applied for the awards in the fall by co-writing research proposals with faculty mentors affiliated with the center. The winners conduct the research in the mentors' laboratories during the spring semester. The program was created to promote undergraduate participation in laboratory research and to encourage students to consider careers in research and medicine. K-State undergraduate students interested in working in a cancer-relevant laboratory are eligible to apply. "This program provides exceptional students the opportunity to work closely with faculty on real research projects," said Rob Denell, center director and university distinguished professor of biology. "We are proud of these students and confident that some of them will go on to be among the nation's top scientists and physicians." The awards will be presented to the students at a banquet Friday, March 30. Also attending will be the center's affiliated faculty, benefactors and friends. The center's programs are funded through private gifts. The center is committed to furthering the understanding of cancer by funding basic cancer research and supporting higher education, training, and public outreach.

National Day Diary project planned March 27

(AP) — What will you be doing on March 27? Joni Cole wants to know. And if you tell her, she might just publish the details. Cole is a co-editor of the "This Day in the Life" book series, which began in 2002 with the publication of "This Day: Diaries from American Women." The concept of her books is this: Women from across the country submit "day diaries" of their thoughts and actions from a single 24-hour period, which Cole then compiles into a snapshot of the varied and often hectic lives of American women. As she prepares the next installment, Cole has teamed up with Colgate to create the National Day Diary Project, which encourages women to post their diaries at www.my247life.com.

"Anybody across the country can pick a single day and she can go to the Web site and post it and read other women's day diaries," says Cole. The added bonus for those who choose March 27 as their day to chronicle is that they may be included in Cole's next book, due out in 2008. The Web site, designed as a virtual community where women can connect over their similarities and marvel at their differences. It offers tips on creating a diary, although Cole says there's no wrong way to participate. "Women should know, this is not a writing project. Every woman has a beautiful voice, the voice she hears in her head when she's thinking," says Cole.

Hays library holding an edible book event April 7

The Hays Public Library in Hays is holding "Books 2 Eat" event Saturday, April 7, at the library, 1205 Main St. in Hays. It is free to the public to both submit an entry and to attend the event. Over the past few years concern about the printed word has been raised in the libraries of America. Patrons are turning to electronic resources and e-books at such a rate that many professionals in the book industry are concerned for the future of the book. While attention is focused on the Internet, a project has been slowly gaining momentum over the past six years with the intent of devouring the book. The goal of this project is that people literally eat books. The day started part as an art movement called Books 2 Eat.

According to the Books 2 Eat website (www.books2eat.com), the "event unites bibliophiles, book artists and food lovers to celebrate the ingestion of culture and its fulfilling nourishment. Participants create edible books that are exhibited, documented, and then consumed." Artists, cooks, and everyone in between, are encouraged to create an edible work of art that addresses or identifies with a book as either the shape or the content. The only real limitations are the imagination. For information, please contact Eric Norris at the Hays Public Library by phone at (785) 625-9014 or by e-mail at enorris@fhsu.edu. More information is available at the Hays Public Library Web site at www.hayspublib.org.

Rexford enjoying 'beautiful' weather

March is almost gone with today being the last Sunday of the month. The weather has been beautiful, allowing the outdoor enthusiast make preparations for gardens and flowerbeds. From Marjorie Leh, "I want to thank all for the lovely cards, prayers, food, the watching over Darrell while I was in Oklahoma at the time of my son, George Hiatt, death. Thank you for your kindness and friendship. God Bless you all." Deb Stepper and Clea Moeder visited Hazel Richardson at Logan Manor in Logan, Kansas on Tuesday, March 20.

Thursday evening I accompanied Beverly Vaughn, of Colby, to a doctor's appointment in Hutchinson on Friday. While in Hutch we did some shopping and happened to meet up with Pat Williams. Pat and Chuck were in Hutchinson for the college basketball tournaments.

After getting home Friday evening, I headed for the Denver airport to pick up my mother, MaDonna Anderson, who had a month visit with daughter and family, Deb and Dan Thompson and grandson, Aaron Morton, in Round Rock, Texas. The Golden Plains High School Play, "Losing Patients," public performance will be Thursday evening, March 29, at 7 p.m. with a dessert reception following. There will be a $2 admission charge. The Rexford Lion's Club Annual Easter Egg Hunt will be April 7, 1:30 p.m. at the City Park for ages toddlers through third grade. Lori Miller will celebrate a birthday March 28. A happy anniversary to Ron & Janette Dible, March 26 and Ken and Teena Johnston on March 30. At the Red Barn: Those attending Barnswallows to play pinocle were Jean Hawkins, Deb Stepper, Rex and Betty Carswell, Maryann and Lawrence Juenemann, Grace Cheney, Lawrence Horinek, Darlene Robben and Dick Sanford. Those attending Come On Down were Darlene Robben, Dick Sanford, Deb Stepper, Mary Stillwell, Rex and Betty Carswell, Jean Hawkins, Lawrence Horinek and Grace Cheney. Until next time, make your week a memorable one.

Scott Allen

December 12, 1968 to March 26, 2006
A million times I've missed you
A million times I've cried.
If love alone could have saved you
You never would have died.
To some you are forgotten
To others just part of the past;
But to me who have loved and lost you
Your love will always last.
It broke my heart to lose you
You didn't go alone;
For my life went with you
The day God called you home
For things on earth didn't matter
But now I feel so alone.
My heart will always be broken

My life will never be whole
Until I see you again on God's golden shore.
God's garden must be beautiful for you are there to stay
The rose of love within me will bloom again someday.
We might be parted for a while
Our hearts will always be together for one day soon
We will hold hands again forever.
Scott we all miss you so deeply. You changed our lives and we will always be grateful for knowing you.
*Rest peacefully my love,
Laurie, Gody, Sarah, and Jessica*
