Famous Hand

My brother, Mike, is the source of this deal, which he played in a pair championship some years ago. He held the North hand and overcalled one spade with two hearts.
South now had a wide choice of bids. He realized his side had a game, but he had no way of knowing where. One possibility was to cuebid spades to try to find the best landing place. Another possibil But South decided the best score at match points might lie in notrump. Accordingly, he jumped to three notrump, running the risk that the diamond suit might be run against him.
West, not vulnerable, bid four spades, and Mike bid four notrump. This was not Blackwood, but merely a raise in notrump. West then bid five spades, which Mike passed. The pass was meant to encourage his partner to go on — otherwise, he would have doubled. South accepted the invitation, revealing his club suit for the first time.
West then bid six spades, doubled by South, but Mike, unwilling to accept a small penalty in lieu of a slam, converted the double to six notrump. After East and South passed, West reasoned that the slam would surely be made, so he pushed on to seven spades.
Once more Mike made an invitational pass, which South again accepted, bidding seven notrump. West doubled, but declarer had three more tricks than he needed. The stop-and-go manner in which the laydown grand slam was reached is surely one of the strangest this department has ever heard of.
