Art club learns about painter By Marj Brown Club News

Ruth Hughes chose to feature the life of 19th century artist, Winslow Homer, for her program at High Plains Art Club when they met at the Methodist Church on June 12.

According to Hughes, Homer was born in Boston, Mass., on Feb. 24, 1836.

When Winslow was very young, his interest in art was encouraged by his mother, Henrietta, who enjoyed painting flowers in watercolor. Hughes said that Homer's father, Charles, was a successful businessman and a loving father. Homer also had two brothers.

Hughes said that because the Homer family moved to Cambridge when Winslow was only six, he always had a love for the country life, and of happy images. When he was only eleven, Homer painted a memorable picture of a boy daydreaming

The family had early plans for Winslow to eventually attend Harvard after graduation; however, his father sold his business to take part in the Great Gold Rush in California and lost all of his life savings in the process.

Hughes said that because Homer had been dreading the thought of sitting in classes at Harvard, for him, his father's loss was not a bad thing.

Even though Winslow did not want to go the Harvard, he still thought he was too young to work.

the first year of instructions and afdollars a week. Winslow would serve as an apprentice for two years until he was 21.

Hughes said that Winslow was so suited for the job that they knocked the $300 down to $100. He later started doing wood-block reproductions and began doing work for Harper's Weekly, for this, he received much better pay.

Hughes added that Homer eventually started painting oils, and then watercolor, but always painted scenes of the country and its people. His paintings of the American Negro are some of his best.

Homer had studied in Europe a time or two and as he grew older he sailed to England to a small fishing village where he rented a cottage. Hughes said, "There was a high wall around the cottage and Homer rarely opened the gate to anyone. He simply watched the village people from a cliff and painted what he saw.'

His brother finally encouraged Homer to move back to the U.S. and settle in Prout's Neck, Maine, with the rest of his family. He received an award of $5,000 from the Carnegie Institute. "However," Hughes said, "he knew that he was members are to collect all of the regstill learning." Homer became istration boxes for the gift basket blind in 1910, and died on Sept. 29, 1910

When Winslow was 19, his father meeting, Virginia Hopper was inpenter would be out of town; Brown agreed.

Carpenter reported on the meeting of the Artists Roundtable at the ter that Winslow would get five Prairie Museum on June 4. She said there would be two workshops, on July 20, 22 there would be a Batik workshop and on Aug. 25, a wheat weaving workshop. Those interested in attending these workshops should call the museum to register.

Several plans were made for the Sunflower Days at the museum on Saturday, Sept. 22. Those will be announced at a later date. Carpenter will have an exhibit of her artwork at the museum during the month of Sept.

The members agreed to paint in Fike Park on Wednesday, June 20 at 10 a.m. The public is invited to come and watch them paint and all area artists are invited to come and paint with them.

Carpenter said that Sue Taylor, museum director, invited all art club members to the reception to be held at the museum for the Kansas State Arts Commission group June 18.

They were also invited to the reception at Lon Frahm's that same evening. That evening, at Frahm's it was announced that Lon would be taking Sharon Kriss's place on the State Arts Commission. Sharon is retiring her position.

Brown announced that club give-away of the "June Art Jubilee" and bring them to the museum on During the business part of the Saturday, June 30 at 4 p.m. where they will draw for the winner.

The club will meet again on Tues-

Dear Readers: Here's a Sound Off that we all should think about. This feature usually runs at the end of this column, but Heloise Central felt it deserved top billing. — Heloise

Dear Heloise: I work in a grocery store. One of my biggest concerns is people who pick up meat, frozen items and perishables and leave them anywhere in the store.

We have a lot of young people who don't care if an item is thawed out and will put it back in the freezer. You would not believe how our store looks at the end of the day. Shoppers leave things everywhere. They pick items up, take two steps and put them down with no regard.

People drop their shopping lists, tissues and gum wrappers in every conceivable place. Just take the product to the register — the cashier will make sure it gets back to its home.

One more thing: Try reading the a party is over and there are lots of lists of items that hang in the aisles leftovers. before you ask where something is. Many times you are standing right nia
