The big news this holiday season is about downsizing: With foreclosures and gas prices up and natural resources dwindling, belt-tightening has been the order of the day.

Do you know how to have a great holiday season without having to trump last year? Take this quiz and see if you know how to make smaller better.

1. If you couldn't be happy at Hanukkah and you're crying at Christmas, even if Santa brings you everything you want, there must be something wrong with you.

True() False()

2. The most cards sent out and the highest-quality gifts usually ensure happiness for the giver.

True() False()

3. Asking everyone for lists of what they want is the easiest way to wrap your head around the overwhelming holiday-shopping chore.

True() False()

4. No one over the age of 10 presents.

True() False()

5. Today no one really expects kids to write thank-you notes. True() False()

6. Perishable or nonmaterial gifts give people nothing to remember; try harder.

feel worse only if you are already depressed. True()False()

7. Being around the less fortu-

8. Setting limits for yourself is an essential step toward a sane holiday season.

True() False() Answers

1. False. Far from it. Something about Christmas and other emotionally charged family holidays gives just about everyone an extra jolt of discomfort or despair at some point. Maybe it's all those rose-colored (or rotten) memories of Christmases can handle it. Really.

past that we keep dredging up. The expectation of the season brings with it lots of angst for even the most mentally healthy among us.

2. False. All the world's money and the longest card list in the neighborhood isn't automatically going to make the holidays successful. Studies have shown that spiritual values reinforced with meaningful family connections are the best holiday-happiness building

3. True. This method ensures that you don't have to really think, or know the person's tastes or interests on your own.

And the idea is to please them, should make adults homemade right? But not so fast. This kind of gift-giving shortchanges everyone when it comes to the pleasure of giving. So realize that you're going to feel vaguely dissatisfied with the whole process if you're just a glorified clerk.

4. False. I'm not talking about a Popsicle-stick trivet. But today, grown-ups make wonderful things for others, including time-tested gifts like knit mittens or homemade fudge

A gift from your heart and hands usually is a huge hit.

5. True.

And that's just the problem. Isn't it discouraging when you've fought the mob at the toy store only to never hear so much as a "thanks" from the little devils?

Well, if you're in a position to do the teaching, show the child how to keep track of who gave him what and send a one-line thank you over the computer or text message. He

6. False. In a downsizing holiday mood?

Then don't add to the piles of stuff your friends and family are steadily accumulating.

Think creatively to keep things off this small planet: Give as gifts salsa lessons or a sushi chef workshop; perfume; sponsorship of an endangered animal; a cheese-ofthe-month membership, or membership at the art museum; or real wax candles.

You get the idea. They'll love the message.

7. False. Generally speaking, being around happy, joyous people will probably set your mood back a few notches if you are suffering from depression in the long season from Hanukkah to Christmas to Kwanzaa.

But it really might make you feel better about yourself and your role in life to do something simple for others. An older person or child, or an unwanted animal, might help make healing a two-way street.

8. True. If you are too overwhelmed to send out Christmas cards, try e-cards to your 10 closest friends or relatives.

Don't host the party -- volunteer to clear the table. Gift cards aren't as tacky as not finishing your shopping at all. Relax, sit back and practice saying No!

Before you know it, you'll be looking forward to thinking about heart-shaped boxes of chocolate.

If you were able to answer six of the eight questions correctly, you deserve a happy holiday season, be it scaled down or supersized.

Electricity returns slowly to rural areas

tinued to come back on for Kansas residents after two winter storms left thousands without electricity.

But despite the progress — the number of outages is now below 25,000 — some Kansans in rural areas might not see their power restored for a week or more.

"We all hope for everybody to be Detwiler of the Kansas Electric Cooperatives. "I'm not sure that's a realistic goal.'

Detwiler said prospects for another winter storm later this week could put a crimp in those plans.

As of Monday afternoon, about 8,000 Westar customers remained without power, while Kansas Electric Cooperatives estimated about 16,000 customers of rural utilities were still in the dark.

Westar said Monday that most of its Topeka customers and many in the Junction City area, Hutchinson and parts of Manhattan had regained electricity.

Westar hopes to have the last of the power outages repaired by midnight Friday.

Consumers still without power in these areas are asked to contact Westar and again report their power
