This is a logic-based number placement puzzle. The goal is to enter a number, 1-9, in each cell in which each row, column and 3x3 region must contain only one instance of each numeral. The solution to today's Sudoku puzzle is below.

Mother's remarriage; codependency

Dear Dr. Brothers: I'm in my second year of college and am considering dropping out, despite the fact that I worked so hard and even made some sacrifices to get here, ones that most of these rich kids don't have to make. The problem's not my grades, but my mom -- someone I no longer understand or love. If you can believe this, I just received word that she's planning on marrying a guy I always thought was just a friend. I guess she was lying to me, in addition to everything else. She tells me she's in love. How could she feel like this at her age and because my dad's only been dead for less than a year? I'm supposed to go to the wedding. I'm not. I'm thinking I might even get married myself to a guy who skipped college. He'd be thrilled.

Dr. Joyce Brothers

• Ask Dr. Brothers

find love, and everyone needs love in their life to make it worthwhile. When you took the time to write and to express your anger, it was a sign that you're capable of growth, change and understanding. It might even give you the strength to go to the wedding.

Dear Dr. Brothers: I've just been deeply hurt because a woman friend of many years accused me of something I don't quite understand, except I do know it's unfair and unkind. Because she knew me all the many years I cared for my ill mother, and the past three years when I've put up with my husband who drinks too much, she lost her temper at lunch and said I was "your typical co-dependent." What is that supposed to mean?

— B.G.

Dear B.G.: I don't know if this term applies to you, but many people, usually women, fit this pattern, which is often destructive to them as well as to the person they may be trying to please and help. Co-dependency is a pattern of dependence on the compulsive behaviors of others. This can be alcoholism, but it can be any addictive, destructive kind of behavior or illness. This doesn't mean the person who may see herself as a helper is actually bad, but usually it's someone who's trapped in a painful situation, who has a powerful, incessant need to please others at almost any cost to herself.

Such individuals can become obsessed with having others think well of them, sometimes even seeing them as saviors of their sick, addictive spouse. They're often unaware or unwilling to accept the fact that this person might be far better off with the kind of solid group support he'd get from a group such as Alcoholics Anonymous. In such relationships, both partners are victims of patterns that are destructive to the quality of their lives.
