The Percentage Factor

Opening lead — five of hearts.

Assume you're declarer at three notrump and West leads a heart. You allow East's king to win the trick, and take the ten-of-hearts return with the ace. How would you continue?

You start with six certain winners -- two spades, a heart, a diamond and two clubs -- so you need three more tricks. There are two different finesses available, either of which would produce the three tricks you need if it succeeded. One is in clubs, the other

The trouble with both of them is that if the finesse you attempt loses, the opponents may be able to cash enough heart tricks to defeat the contract, leaving you with no opportunity to try the other finesse. So the big question is which finesse to take.

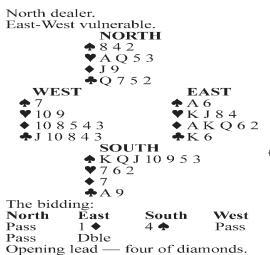

The probability of the diamond finesse working is 50-50; if West has the king, you're home, but if East has it, you'll probably go down. Your chance of success is about the same in the club suit, where you have to guess which opponent to finesse for the queen. Moreover, and this is a key consideration, if you successfully guess which finesse to take, you have no intention of trying the other one.

Bearing this in mind, there is a line of play available that can elevate your chances to well above 50 percent. It stems from the fact that when missing the Q-x-x-x of a suit, the queen will be singleton or doubleton about once in every three deals.

Since you are not planning to finesse in both clubs and diamonds, it therefore makes sense to first cash the A-K of clubs to see whether the queen falls. If it doesn't, you still have the diamond finesse in reserve.

The recommended approach will succeed approximately two-thirds of the time, whereas relying on just one finesse wins only about half the time.

Tomorrow: Endplay Charlie.

Endplay Charlie

Once upon a time there lived a bridge player by the name of Endplay Charlie. Of course, there was a very good reason why he was known by this name.

Charlie wasn't much of a player, as bridge players go. He generally bid badly and had to suffer the consequences of this failing. But he was very good when it came to playing the cards.

In particular, he was especially good at executing endplays, and often redeemed poor contracts with his extraordinary aptitude in this area.

Moreover, he was also gifted when it came to defending against endplays. More than anything else, Charlie loathed getting caught in an endplay, and he would go to any lengths to prevent this from happening. Consider the play he once made on this deal. Holding the East hand, he won the diamond lead with the queen and continued with the ace. Declarer ruffed and played a high trump. Charlie took the ace and returned a trump.

South won in his hand and led the ace of clubs, on which Charlie dropped the king! As a result, declarer lost two heart tricks and went down one.

What would have happened had Charlie played the six of clubs on the ace, as any normal human being would have done? In that case, declarer could have made the contract by following low from dummy on the next club lead, and Charlie would have found himself thoroughly endplayed after taking the king. Whatever he returned, South would score the rest of the tricks.

Many players tried, but they seldom succeeded in endplaying Endplay Charlie!

Tomorrow: Backup plan.
