Zebra fish help research on 'mad cow'

The zebra fish could be the latest piece in the jigsaw in the fight against bovine spongiform encephalopathy, commonly known as mad cow disease, and chronic wasting disease.

The fish are being used in the Institute as fruit flies and mice are used in other labs.

Dr Ted Allison is using them help define the normal role of the prion protein in a healthy brain and compare that to what the protein is doing in a diseased brain, according to a report in Troy Media.

"Because zebra fish have a lot of advantages as a model," he said, "we're able to modify the genes easily. We're able to knock down gene expression or make transgenic fish genes to increase expression. This means we can alter proteins that we expect to be related to prion protein and interact with prion protein.

Allison said a new genetic phenotype has emerged. When prion protein levels are knocked down in zebra fish, their brains fail to develop properly. This phenotype does not persist in mice. The discovery is an important step toward better understanding of prion function, he said.

Filing early also can speed that Extension financial management specialist. She offered these tax tips:

• Start now to organize and categorize receipts.

• Check to see if you qualify for one or more tax credits. For example, working individuals or families who have children and earn $37,000 or less, often can receive an Earned Income Tax Credit. Some low-wage taxpayers without children are eligible, too. Details are available at www.irs. gov/eitc.

• Free tax preparation services for low-income and older adults labs at the Alberta Prion Research are offered by volunteer organizations in many areas. These include Volunteer Income Tax Assistance , Tax Counseling for the Elderly and the American Association of gram. Some K-State Research and Extension offices partner with volunteer tax sites to encourage taxpayers to save refunds and "saved" tax preparation fees to build emergency savings.

• If due a sizeable refund, meet with your employer's human resources agent to adjust your salary withholding to better match your tax liability for the coming year. This typically increases take-home pay. And, rather than providing the government an interest-free loan by paying excess withholding each month, you can deposit that money in a savings account.

• File electronically to speed the process (and possible refund) and reduce paperwork.

More tips on managing money are available at county extension offices and on the extension website: www.oznet.ksu.edu/financialmanagement/.
