Choose some new plants to go along with old favorites

I'm a firm believer that we should all plant something new each year. Whether you are strictly a vegetable gardener, or deal only with flowers, you should consider trying one or two of the new offerings that are presented to us each year by those fantastic plant breeders.

Talk to any wheat farmer in your area and you'll not find a sinold wheat varieties like Turkey, Blackhull, Wichita, Red Chief or Tenmarq. They were all great varieties in their day, but each newly developed variety through the years has greatly improved yield, disease resistance and hardiness of every area of the Midwest.

And so it is with vegetables and flowers. Very few of us would plant a Marglobe or a Sioux tomato anymore, would we? They were wonderful in the 1940s and '50s before the days of hybrids, but today we have Celebrity, Heartland and Northern Exposure that have more than doubled yields and disgarden.

of the many choices contained in the wonderful Profusion Hybrid Zinnia series or a few seeds of the new Diana Blueberry Hybrid Digle one who still plants one of the anthus that is available this year for the first time.

Every year, there are literally hundreds of new cultivars making their initial appearance, and we should take advantage of a few of them. If you're even remotely dissatisfied with some of the things you're putting in the ground from year to year, then why not try one of the new ones?

Among the new varieties and types offered each year, a few carry the vaunted "All-America" designation, which means they will give you even more of a chance to grow something far beyond the variety or type that you are now ease resistance to our efforts in the growing. An All-America introduction means that it has been Back in the '30s, my mother tested for at least three years, in would have been beside herself if every section of the U.S. and Canto other, prior introductions.

The top designation among rose varieties is the "All America Rose Selection," which is completely apart from the vegetable All America selections, but determined in much the same manner. This year, there are three designations. One is a beautiful Hybrid Tea introduction called Pink Promise. It has been chosen to represent the National Breast Cancer Foundation, and a portion of the proceeds from each plant sold will go to the foundation. Another top selection is a gorgeous Floribunda called Cinco de Mayo. It offers a WOW blend of smoked lavender and rusty red-orange blended with coral tones that you have to see to appreciate.

And the third new one this year is a shrub rose named Carefree Celebration with brilliant hues of orange and peach. There are hundreds of other new introductions out there each year, All-America winners or not. Do yourself a favor and try one of them, whether it's a new Kentucky Dreamer green bean or a Green Jewel Echi-
