New business outgrows location

Casa Burrito, the newest business to open its doors in Colby, has outgrown its facility in less than three months and is moving to 310 North Franklin, still in downtown Colby.

"We had no idea business would be this good," said Brent Powell, co-owner. "We just thought we'd move here and sort of take it easy, but Colby has been really good to us."

The new facility, with seating for 118 people, should be open for business by the middle of June, he said.

"We'll be adding to the menu with sopapillas, chile relenos, shrimp and fish, and we will be applying for a liquor license," Powell said.

He said word of mouth has been his best form of advertising, with repeat customers from out of town and a couple from McDonald who come three times a week, just because they like the food.

He said future plans include a possible banquet room on the upper floor, plus, they are considering a catering service.

"TNT Auction has asked us to serve their sales," he said, "so we will be very busy."

New business hours have not been set yet, Powell said.

Casa Burrito's phone number is (970)388-3052.

Wheat benefits from weekend rain showing shorter and thinner areas, which denotes freeze damage but the damage is minimal," Olson said.

Kansas is rated as the nation's top wheat producer, and Thomas County is rated number one wheat-producing county in the state. Farmers are hoping the statistics will hold, and so far, it looks like it will.

"Texas farmers aren't so lucky with their wheat crop this year," said Jim Diebert, custom harvester from Colby.

About 50 percent of the custom harvesters have chosen to not even go into Texas this year, because there is nothing to harvest, he said. Texas and Oklahoma suffered both drought and frost this year, severely damaging the wheat.

Diebert said he cut a half circle of irrigated wheat last Thursday and it made 12 bushels to the acre, better than a lot of other fields.

Clint Milliman, Thomas County Extension agent, said wheat disease pressure is low right now, however, "we are seeing some barley yellow dwarf in a few fields."

With the moist and cool weather, Kansas could possibly see some leaf rust flare up, Milliman said. 75 to 80 percent of the yield is determined from the condition of the top two leaves, and if farmers know it's coming, they can spray with a fungicide to protect the plant. Leaf rust blows in from the south, he said, so when the southern counties have it, the northern counties have a window of opportunity to spray.

The Kansas Agricultural Statistics Field Crop Report came out Tuesday and reported 91 percent of the wheat in the state is headed, while 62 percent of northwest Kansas was headed.

Crop conditions for the week ending May 24, reveal the state's wheat crop to be six percent very poor, 10 percent poor, 37 percent fair, 42 percent good and five percent as excellent.

As of last week, 59 percent of northwest Kansas had adequate topsoil moisture and 33 percent was rated as having surplus moisture. Subsoil moisture for this area stood at 97 percent adequate with no surplus.

Repair grants available

Acting State Director Darla Buckman says the U.S. Department of Agriculture Rural Development agency is accepting applications for grants to help low-income rural residents repair their homes.

The Housing Preservation Grant Program, she said, provides money to sponsoring organizations to help with repair and rehabilitation of single-family and rental residences in rural areas.

"The availability of affordable housing in our rural areas continues to be a major factor which contributes to economic development," she said. "Many times, with certain repairs, existing rural homes can continue to be a valuable asset to Kansas families and their communities."

Grants can be used to weatherize and repair existing structures, install or improve plumbing or provide access to people with disabilities.

Sponsors that administer the grants can include state agencies, local government, Native American tribes and nonprofit organizations. The program can also provide help to rental property owners who agree to make their units available to low-income families.

The agency may award up to $10 million in competitive grants, she said. Applications are due by Friday, July 10, on the form available at www.grants.gov.

For information, call the state headquarters at (785) 271-2700 or go to www.rurdev.usda.gov/ks.

New teacher to focus on technology

He said he would like to teach students about recent technological innovations in agriculture such as soil testing which allows farmers to measure how many seeds a patch of soil could absorb. These soil testing techniques could also be used when deciding the amount of pesticides, fertilizers and herbicides that would be appropriate for a plot of soil, Rundell said.

Rundell owns a family farm north of Levant. He and his family grow wheat and milo as well as keeping a few head of cattle. During his life he has been involved in various occupations including a retail meat-cutter at Dillons, para-professional at Colby Middle School and a fresh area manager at the Walmart in Goodland from 1999 to 2007. At Walmart he was in charge of the meat, bakery, deli, produce, dairy, floral and frozen food sections of the store. Rundell also worked as a quality assurance agent at Monfort, a meat packing plant, in Greeley, Colo. from 1989-1995. At Monfort he did research and development of new food products. He also made sure the food products met quality food and safety specifications.

Rundell graduated from Colby High School in 1981. He received an associates degree at Colby Community College in 1983 and he got a bachelors of science degree in agriculture and animal science at Kansas State University in 1985.

Rundell will be taking a transition to teaching program at Fort Hays State starting Saturday, August 15, Krebs said. On the first day of class he will receive a restricted teachers license that will allow him to teach full-time at the high school and middle school. The program lasts two years and Rundell will receive a certified teachers license after he finished the program.
